Adlai America's Public Voice Had Private Policy Qualms

'It Took Years Off My Life'

By ARCH MacKENZIE
WASHINGTON (CP) — Adlai Stevenson's death in London Wednesday stunned many world leaders and left the United States without a potent spokesman in the United Nations. It also removed the ranking member of the American liberal wing.
It was at the United Nations

Stevenson despite personal qualms often defended controversial American decisions, among them the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion and the sending of U.S. marines to the Dominican Republic.

A leading radio correspondent, David Schoenbrun in Paris, said Stevenson last week during a Paris visit had called U.S.

intervention in the Dominican Republic "a massive blunder."

Schoenbrun also quoted Stevenson as saying his defence of it in the UN "took several years off my life."

In the U.S. capital, President Johnson was reported near tears when he got word of the 63-year-old UN ambassador's death.

The president called him "that towering man, a true citizen of the world."

Johnson said he is sending Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey to London to accompany Stevenson's body back home.

Humphrey also inherits Stevenson's mantle as the leader of the American Liberals. Stevenson came to Washington first as a young government lawyer at the start of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal administration in 1934.

Speaking on television later, Johnson asked adversary and friend alike to "pause for a moment and weep for one who was a friend and guide to all mankind."

"A merry heart doeth good

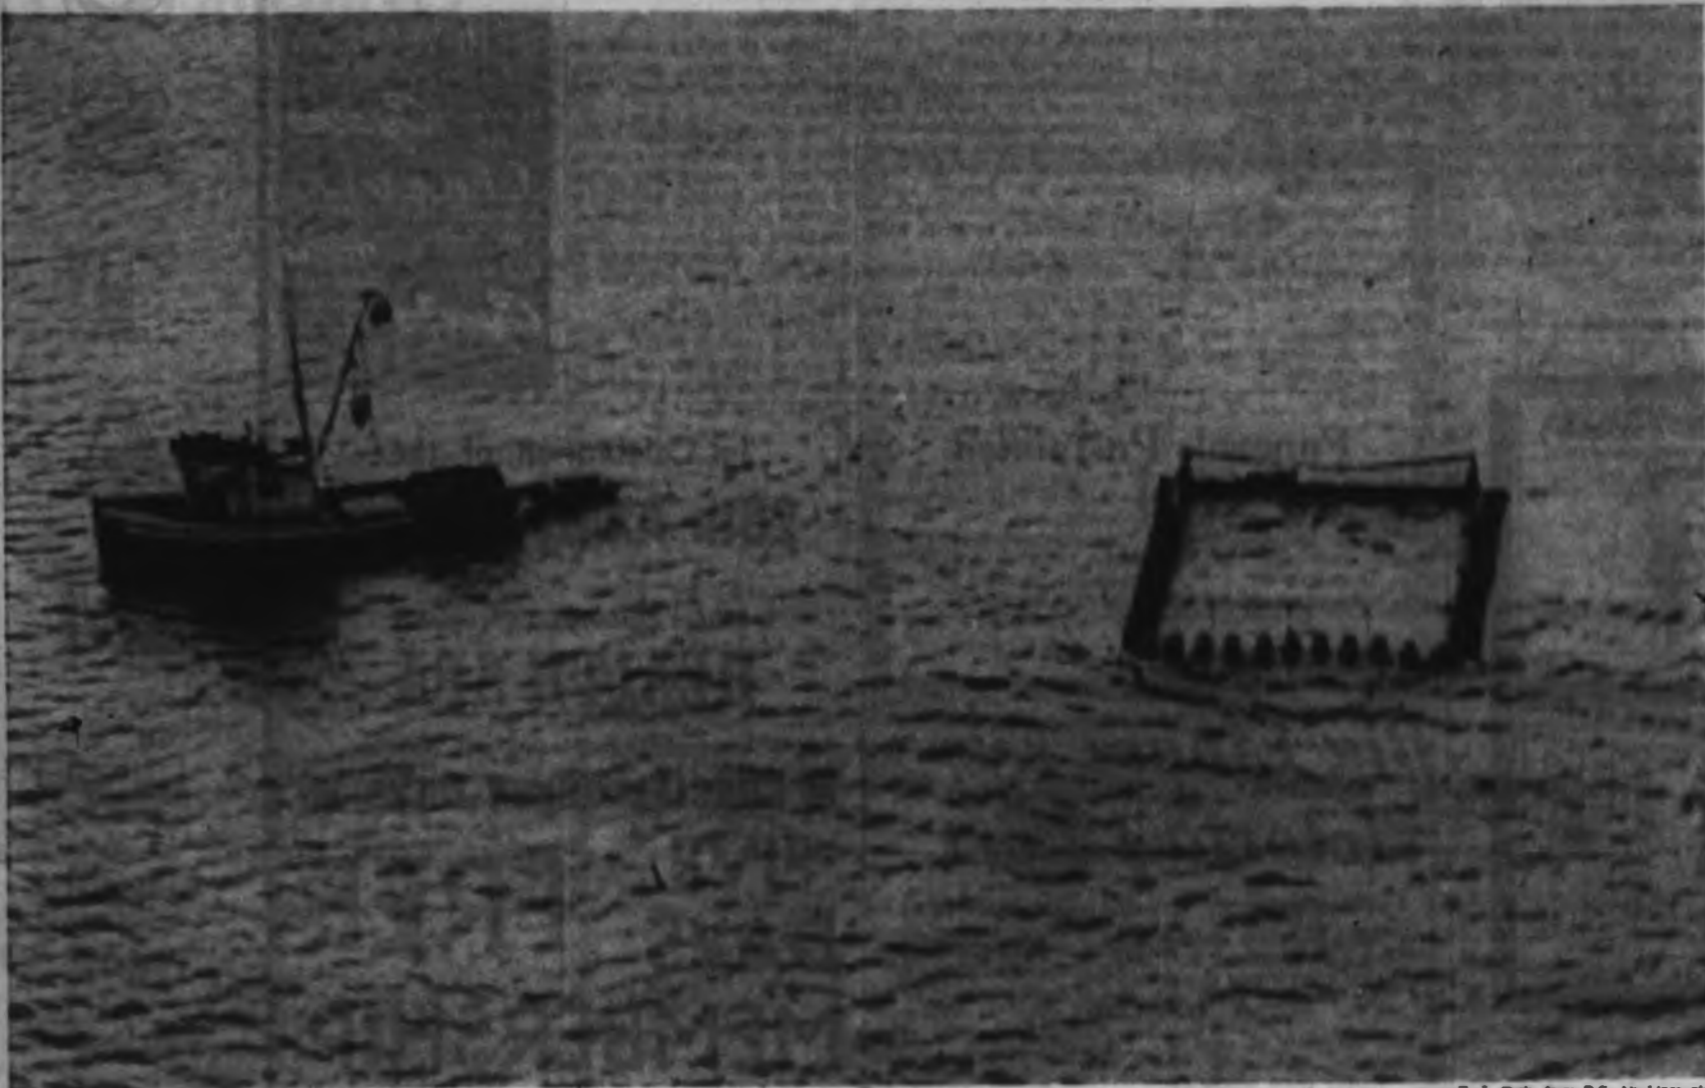

like a medicine but a broken spirit dryeth the bones," Stevenson once quoted a wise man as saying amid adversity — one of those hundreds of original or borrowed lines that fell so easily from his pen and lips.

Stevenson's spirit may have bent at times under the buffets of public life but they never broke, even when he was threatened so badly twice by Dwight D. Eisenhower for the U.S. presidency.

His wit, humor, eloquence and simple humanity won him a following whose dedicated loyalty was matched only by that accorded the late John Kennedy.

Bribe Attempt

EX-AIDE DENIS CHARGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Former cabinet aide Raymond Denis was charged Wednesday with attempting to bribe a lawyer and attempting to obstruct the course of justice.

Crown Attorney John Cassels of Ottawa announced the charges a few hours after Denis was arrested by the RCMP at his home in suburban Montreal and taken to Ottawa by air.

Denis, former executive assistant to two Liberal cabinet ministers and a central figure at the Dorion judicial inquiry, was scheduled to appear in magistrate's court today at 10 a.m. EDT.

Denis, 32, is a lawyer and a former Liberal election campaign organizer. The charges against him:

● That in Ottawa between July 13 and 17 last year he "did unlawfully and corruptly offer Pierre Lamontagne, who then acting as agent on behalf of the U.S.A. in the extradition proceeding

Hurt Boy Lifted From B.C. Peak

NELSON (CP) — Richard Therrien, 18, was rescued from a windswept glacial park Wednesday night by a helicopter crew. Police said the boy was taken to hospital here for observation.

NELSON (CP) — A 13-year-old Vancouver boy lay injured high on a storm-swept mountain peak Wednesday night as a helicopter crew attempted a rescue.

A boys' camp counselor said the boy fell during a hiking trip at the 8,200-foot level of Kokanee peak.

Word did not reach this Kootenay city, 12 miles from the mountain, until 7 p.m., several hours after the accident. A helicopter was dispatched, but a spokesman of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. said the pilot might be forced to wait out the storm.

GROUP OF 13
The boy, whose name was withheld, was one of a group of 22 youngsters and four leaders from Camp Lourdes, who have been camping and hiking in Kokanee Glacier Park.

The extent of his injuries was not known.

Strike Action Withheld By Postmen

OTTAWA (UPI) — Montreal postal employees have decided at an all-day meeting here to withhold strike action over wage demands until they know definitely what increases the government will offer them.

Possibilities of a nation-wide strike of postal workers appeared to have been averted — at least for the time being.

Impound Whale, Union Urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the West Coast Fishermen's Union says he wants the Canadian Government to "impound" three live killer whales before the Americans get them.

Homer Stevens, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (Ind.), Wednesday criticized the federal and provincial governments for taking no action on the "export" of the killer whales.

He was referring to Namu, the killer whale caught off the B.C. coast and sold by three fishermen to a Seattle aquarium for $8,000.

The whale now is being towed down the coast to Seattle, and is being accompanied on the journey by a female and two small killer whales swimming outside Namu's pen.

Passengers aboard a B.C. Airlines plane Tuesday counted seven killer whales escorting the caged Namu. They made the count near Alert

Bay, 183 miles northwest of Vancouver.

In a letter to Fisheries Minister Robichaud, Homer Stevens said:

"We strongly urge the federal government to declare an embargo until the Vancouver aquarium, together with the federal and provincial governments, can impound the other three whales."

Stevens did not say how three killer whales might be impounded.

NDP Delegate Applauds Death Announcement

TORONTO (CP) — One delegate of the NDP national convention, David Middleton of Toronto, applauded when Leader T. C. Douglas announced the death of Adlai Stevenson, U.S. chief delegate to the UN Wednesday.

The NDP leader passed and said: "I hope there will be no more demonstrations of bad taste of that kind."

Mr. Middleton, who has strongly condemned U.S. policy in Viet Nam during the convention, later apologized for "a totally unbecomingly and shameful act on my part."

LONDON (AP) — Adlai E. Stevenson, the voice of the United States at the United Nations since 1961, collapsed on a London street Wednesday and died. He was 63.

First indications were that he had suffered a stroke or a heart attack, but neither the U.S. embassy nor St. George's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead, was prepared to state a cause of death immediately.

SADDED WEST

His death saddened much of the Western world, which had regarded Stevenson as its forthright spokesman in debates at the United Nations, where he clashed often with Soviet spokesmen.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General U Thant said Stevenson had earned the respect and admiration of all his colleagues "for his extraordinary human qualities." Former president Harry Truman said Stevenson's quest for peace "will be long remembered by a grateful nation and his friends throughout the world."

RADIO RECORDING

Stevenson had attended UN meetings in Geneva and had arrived in London to talk with friends and diplomatic contacts. He made a radio recording Wednesday at the embassy, and friends there said he seemed perfectly normal.

Some Pictures Certain In Historic Mars Sweep

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mariner 4 made its long-awaited flight past Mars Wednesday night and scientists said four hours later that it apparently made at least some pictures.

Doubt developed within minutes after the spacecraft's camera began operating that its systems were performing properly. Its signals told conflicting stories.

But Dr. William H. Pickering, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, told a late-evening press conference:

"I have no reason to believe that Mariner 4 did not record pictures during its historic flight past Mars earlier today."

The spacecraft was supposed to take, and relay later to earth, up to 21 pictures that could show whether the mystery planet harbors life — answering a question that has intrigued man for ages.

The camera at first appeared to be operating as planned. But later, signals indicated that the tape recorder which stores the pictures for later playback might have functioned improperly.

Pickering said: "I believe the anomaly (conflict) in data received from the spacecraft may be associated with signals concerning whether the tape recorder stopped as planned."

Earlier, the Mariner tracking station at Woomera, Australia, reported that Mariner failed to take pictures. Pickering said he did not know "how they reached that conclusion."

Coroner Adjourns Inquest

Jury Views Crash Victims

By LESLIE MULLIN
VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury looked Wednesday at the broken human remains of last week's airliner crash while the search for the crash cause went on.

Coroner Glen McDonald opened the inquest into the deaths of the 52 victims, and adjourned it "probably for four or five weeks" once the five men and one woman of the jury had seen the 52 bodies and heard medical testimony about one victim.

Mr. McDonald said the victim was the only one readily recognizable.

Dr. Harmon listed the man's injuries as a fractured skull, fractured pelvis, all ribs fractured, torn heart and lung, ruptured spleen and liver, broken arm, and a head injury that destroyed part of the brain.

BODIES RELEASED

The coroner said bodies whose X-rays show no fragments in them can be released for burial now the jury has viewed them. Bodies with fragments in them will be released as soon as the fragments are removed.

Investigators here are working in RCMP and city laboratories analyzing the pieces of plane and its contents already recovered.

SEARCH GOES ON

Workers at the crash scene, in swampy land west of 100 Mile House, are searching for more fragments, believed scattered over an area seven miles long. Some pieces may be buried.

Investigators say they believe an explosion took place in the plane's aft port washroom. But they have veered away from the word bomb.

Their disclosure of unusual acid remains came after a meeting of 20 top officials and accident investigators.

Dr. Warren Lovell, a Seattle pathologist who has investigated airline crashes causing 2,000 fatalities, described the perforated overnight bag as "a fascinating piece of evidence."

Dr. Lovell, who has been helping with the investigation, said the holes are "real weird," and are presumed to have been made by something coming from outside the bag.

The bag contained a pink nylon night gown, also perforated, a part of which was found to a metal tag inside the bag, which could have been caused by acid, he said.

The bag was normally kept only a few feet from the washroom, whose floor and fittings were found hunkled apparently by the explosion.

A lawyer representing Mrs. Douglas G. Edgar, 40, of Surrey, B.C. was also at the inquest. The Edgars were the only family with legal counsel at the hearing.

Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co. has confirmed two passengers on the plane took out life insurance policies totalling about $200,000.

The Sun said Tuesday Douglas Edgar, who was unemployed, took out one of the policies, valued at $125,000, just before the flight.

Strike Turmoil Hits Waterfront Of Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The waterfront was in a turmoil Wednesday as a spreading strike of some grain handlers snarled the overseas movement of Prairie grain.

Five ships that were loading wheat were taking on their cargoes at about half the usual speed. Seven others were standing off waiting to berth and load grain.

NOT CRITICAL YET

"The situation hasn't become critical yet but it could be if the strike lasts..." said Capt. B. D. L. Johnson, the harbor master.

Two major elevators were strikebound, including one that handles most of the grain shipments to Communist China. Two other large elevators operated partially. Several other smaller elevators operated fully.

STUCK POOL

The International Brewery, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers Union (CLC) struck Alberta Wheat Pool, which handles about one-third the grain through Vancouver, June 2.

The tieup, however, did not apparently affect materially the flow of grain from here.

The handlers charged Tuesday grain destined for Alberta Wheat Pool was being diverted to other elevators. A series of suspensions and walkouts followed.

DID NOT SHOW

Grain handlers did not show up for work Wednesday morning at the major elevators. But by afternoon work had resumed at some.

Early Wednesday night Alberta and Saskatchewan wheat pool were the only major elevators completely tied up. United Grain Growers and Pacific Elevators were partially operating.

Meanwhile, a major grain export firm here said uncertainty about the status of the strike is seriously impairing export plans.

The official said the strike is costing exporters "thousands of dollars."

WANTS TO KNOW

"We'd much rather know one way or the other if there is going to be a full-scale strike or if the union plans only to continue its strike against the Alberta Wheat Pool," said the spokesman.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's port was back in operation Wednesday, though the strike which was the root cause of its 36-hour tieup was not settled.

The tieup resulted from support members of the International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) gave a continuing strike by the Montreal Port Employees' Union (CNTU).

NOT ENDORSED

But the ILA never endorsed the action of 5,000 men who stayed off the job in sympathy with the strike of 1,000 employees of the National Harbors Board.

The pickets were limited to four at each gate of the port by a court injunction. Monday and Tuesday picketing had averted in a strikers' effort to put teeth in their strike, which has been going on since June 14.

Workers Approve Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shoreworkers in British Columbia's $80,000,000 a year fishing industry have approved a new two-year contract with the B.C. Fisheries Association.

The new contract for the shore workers, members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (UFAW), guarantees a pay raise of 19 an hour spread over the two-year period.

Earlier, more than 3,000 salmon net fishermen and tendermen voted to accept an association offer increasing salmon values one to five cents a pound for various types.

Herridge Leads Group March On Consulate

By MICHAEL GILLAN

TORONTO (CP) — A band of new Democrats ignored an appeal for moderation by President Claude Jodoin of the Canadian Labor Congress Wednesday, and marched on the United States consulate to protest the administration's intervention in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

About 150 youthful delegates led by a 70-year-old member of Parliament, H. W. Herridge, of Kootenay West, carried placards to the steps of the consulate on University Avenue and protested U.S. policies in the two world trouble spots.

MALT BOMBINGS

The march was a follow-up to a resolution passed shortly before by the federal convention that called for a halt to U.S. bombings against North Viet Nam and for peace talks among all warring groups.

Before Mr. Herridge announced the demonstration, the CLC president cautioned the 800 delegates against heaping all the blame for world crisis on the U.S.

"Some people have a tendency to forget the extreme left dictatorships," Mr. Jodoin said.

DEMAND WITHDRAWAL

"What kind of co-operation did Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain get from Hanoi and China?" in connection with the Commonwealth peace efforts to get peace negotiations started?

Mr. Herridge, standing on the consulate steps, said some members in all Canadian political parties are disturbed about U.S. involvement in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic. Other delegates demanded the withdrawal of American forces.

GET OFF STEPS

The marchers returned to convention headquarters in the Royal York Hotel when a consular official asked Mr. Herridge to get off the steps.

Andrew Brewin, MP for Toronto Greenwood, introduced the resolution and called it a "reasonable, firm and balanced" statement. He said its wording was less strong than many delegates wanted.

U.S. TO BLAME

Mr. Brewin said U.S. bombings were emphasized because a halt in the air attacks was a "necessary precondition" to getting peace talks going.

A policy committee drafted the convention resolution from suggestions sent in by riding organizations most of which blamed the U.S. for the entire crisis in Southeast Asia.

Island Man Killed in North

PORT ALBERT — Word was received Wednesday of the death in Prince Rupert of Edward La Jeunesse, 46. He died in hospital Monday of injuries sustained when he was run over by a logging truck 14 miles north of Queen Charlotte City June 28.

Investigators agreed an overnight bag apparently spattered by acid is a major clue to the explosion, presumed to have knocked down the Canadian Pacific Airlines DC-6B Thursday near 100 Mile House, 170 miles northeast of here.

"I don't know what this means yet, but I have no doubt this is the most important evidence we have found," said Mr. McDonald.

Queried about possible connections between acid and explosions, he replied: "I think I still have enough high school chemistry to make a picnic acid bomb."

UNNATURAL DEATH

The coroner's jury was told by pathologist Dr. T. R. Harmon the victim most easily recognizable — a 35-year-old man — came to an unnatural death from multiple injuries.

DENNY'S OF VICTORIA

Toll Still Mounts

SINCE THIS newspaper stressed last June 23 the urgency of action to control more strictly the licensing of motorcycle drivers on B.C. highways four more young lives have been lost.

That brings to 13 deaths and more than 250 injuries the toll to date, and the year just more than half gone.

Here are some facts which ought to startle the parents of prospective motorcycle riders, and of which the general public should be aware:

Probably not one in ten young drivers is ever subjected to a test of skill before he mounts a motorcycle.

A learner's licence is sufficient authorization under the Motor Vehicles Act for anyone who wants to drive a motorcycle.

A learner's licence entitles a rider to carry a passenger.

The passenger is not insurable. (So far this year only one passenger has died.)

B.C. traffic authorities are studying the situation, and amendments to the Motor Vehicle Act are to be expected in the near future. But what of the present? How long must we wait? If the fatality figures for 1965 are projected to the end of the year we can expect something in the neighborhood of 28 deaths in motorcycle accidents by Dec. 31.

This dreadful price is not acceptable, and the regulation that every rider shall wear a crash helmet is not going to stop the slaughter.

The motorcycle total will have passed 10,000 by the end of the year, with approximately 100 a month of new licences. Last year, with 9,000 motorcycles licensed, there were only four fatalities. Why this sudden acceleration in the accident rate?

More young people are riding. There are new, cheaper models suddenly available to them, and the trend is away from the jalopy to the "murdercycle," as one motor vehicles branch man named the machine.

What can be done to more effectively control this situation, where the hands of officials are tied by regulations under the act and overworked policemen cannot cope with multiplying infractions?

First, it is suggested that learner's licences no longer be considered adequate for a motorcycle driver.

Second, that no driver shall carry a passenger until he has passed an efficiency test.

Third and fourth, that provision be made and personnel provided to ensure that all drivers are tested on motorcycles before they are licensed.

Finally, that an effort be made by all concerned—dealers, parents, motorcycle clubs, teachers, policemen and all in authority—to impress upon young riders that they possess a vehicle with lethal potentialities and that for their own sake, and the sake of the public—car drivers, pedestrians, and particularly children—that they exercise care and caution and generally drive with sanity.

Costly Causeway

MANY BRITISH COLUMBIANS will be mentally blushing over Municipal Affairs Minister Daniel Campbell calling Prince Edward Island a potato patch in reference to the Pearson government's announcement of a decision to call tenders later in the year for a $148,000,000 causeway between the island province and the mainland. There was no call for him to be rude. But there is justification for his claim that Ottawa is giving the east preferential treatment over the west. And it is a valid point that this great sum of money could be spent to Canada's better advantage elsewhere—perhaps particularly, as Mr. Campbell suggested, as an investment in the productive growth of British Columbia.

When the Conservative government announced a similar causeway plan on a considerably less expensive scale in the spring of 1962—the estimate of cost was then $105,000,000—Mr. Diefenbaker was promptly accused by his opponents of an attempt to bribe the Maritimes voters. This charge having been made, it would be extremely difficult now for Prime Minister Pearson to equivocate himself out of appearing in the same light, although the Prince Edward Islanders have been given the satisfaction of knowing that should an election be called soon, they can be hopeful of having a causeway instead of ferries no matter which way they vote nor which of the leading contenders for office succeeds.

But if Mr. Pearson would escape the full force of the accusation previously hurled at Mr. Diefenbaker, it would help if he could cite the economic reasoning that warrants such a large outlay of the Canadian taxpayers' money. So far he has not, and it is indeed doubtful that he can.

Will the additional tourist business in Prince Edward Island and the Maritimes generally that may accrue from having a causeway create jobs and revenues in any way commensurate with the cost of the development, even over a long period? Will the employment made available in the construction of the link between island and mainland be of lasting benefit? And if the answers are no, is Prince Edward Island in a desperate plight as long as it is dependent on heavily-subsidized ferries?

These are the doubts that must assail most of the taxpayers of the country, and that lend weight to Mr. Campbell's suggestion that in the national interest it would make more sense to invest where there is a promise of substantial return.

For Profit, a Loss

VANCOUVER ISLANDERS, unless they possess cablevision service or are prepared to journey to Empire Stadium in Vancouver, won't be able to watch the B.C. Lions on their home grounds this year. Under terms of the present contract between Lions' management and Victoria Cablevision Ltd. there will be no closed circuit broadcast of the games as there was last year in the Royal Theatre.

Football fans have received this information with indignation, in some cases, and criticism of the CBC and the Lions' management. But they are scarcely justified.

Football, like hockey, is a private enterprise. In order to protect their gate receipts it has been the custom to throw a blackout curtain around sports events of this kind to a radius of 100 miles. If the Lions' football games were televised it would reduce receipts by an estimated $10,000 a game.

Unfortunately it is technically impossible to confine the non-viewing area to Vancouver proper, or the immediate vicinity of the games' origin.

Perhaps, way in the future, Vancouver Islanders will have a stadium and a team of their own. Until then they are stuck with the black and white version of the game—providing the cablevision service is available and they are prepared to pay for it.

"I don't know what it means, but it's not a bad name for a new group."

Washington Calling

Doubts About an OAS Force

By MARQUIN CHILDS from Caracas

DETERMINED men with political roots that go deep into the past are setting out to prove in Venezuela that neither military dictatorship nor Communist takeovers are inevitable in Latin America.

President Raul Leoni is well into the second year of his elected five-year term and, in so far as the passing observer can judge, the country is stable and the resolute effort to put down Communist guerrillas and terrorists is succeeding.

Leoni is solidly built, quietly assured, with a sense of humor that comes to the surface as he talks. He is said to be less impetuous, less spectacular, than his friend and ally in the years of exile, Romulo Betancourt, whom he succeeded in the presidency and who was the first elected chief executive in Venezuela's history to finish his term. But his temperament is suited to the consolidation essential for the massive program of expansion and reform still going forward.

We talked on the terrace of the suburban villa in which he is living with his family until an official residence can be refurbished. With great frankness he covered a wide range of subjects. But it was plain that the still-unresolved crisis in the Dominican Republic is his foremost concern.

Leoni showed a remarkable understanding of the reasons for America's intervention on that fateful day in April when the Marines were ordered into Santo Domingo. You could not have another Cuba, he said. You had this factor in your public opinion to consider.

Nevertheless, it was unmitigated action contrary to the basic principle of the Organization of American States, and this is what President Leoni came back to again and again in our talk. He reflects the profound shock wave felt from one up of the continent to the other over an act raising sombre memories of the days of the Yankee gringo and strutting military figures installed to "keep order."

Off and on Leoni spent 18 years in exile but he and Betancourt were always in close touch with the Democratic Action Party and with the strongly democratic trade union movement even though through decades of dictatorship they were often driven underground.

The first article of his faith is representative government—government duly elected by the people—and it is here that he sees a significant part of the United States' failure in the Dominican crisis. Communists had, of course, infiltrated the rebel movement. No one could know this better than Venezuela's president who has had to devote energy and resources to repelling subversion from Cuba. But if a free election were held in the Dominican Republic, Leoni is certain that the Communists would be a negligible factor. And it is to such an election freely held that Leoni and other democratically minded leaders in Latin America look for a satisfactory resolution of the Dominican issue.

The big question is whether this can come about and when. And until it is achieved Venezuela's president has grave doubts over the proposed permanent inter-American military force that is supposedly to be considered at the Rio de Janeiro conference of OAS foreign ministers on August 4. Such a force would, it was hoped in Washington, be one gain to come out of the Dominican tragedy—a joint force prepared to prevent takeovers by force and violence.

Who is to command such a force? he asks. What will be its size? Will elements from the forces of individual nations be permanently assigned to such a standby force? Or will they simply be designated for use when a particular need arises?

These are complex questions. In each country there would be difficult constitutional issues to resolve. And we have so far received no enlightenment on these points.

Leoni, therefore, believes it would be better to postpone the Rio conference to allow time for thorough exploration of a proposal that goes to the heart of the future of the OAS. In the view of this reporter it is hardly an exaggeration to say that it is central to the future of the hemisphere. If there is a U.S. effort to push at all costs a hastily conceived plan the divisive effect will be serious and it could be catastrophic.

U.S. power—military, economic, in every aspect—is paramount. You have only to see what part it plays in Venezuela's swiftly expanding economy to understand this as the Latin Americans understand it. But what use the United States will make of this power is the question leaders like Leoni are asking in the aftermath of the Dominican crisis.

A Simple Incompetence

By SHAUN MERRON from Boston

THE newest, tallest and most trumpeted building in Boston is officially open and New England Merchants' Bank no longer requires Ed Hickey to say on his commercials: "You'll do business with us soon at the Prudential Building. You can do it now."

Among the new tenants is the Canadian Government Travel Bureau. They have published a Canadian travel supplement in the Boston Herald. While I blush and squirm, let me tell you of its glories.

"Hello Boston," it says on the cover, "we've come to live with you." That's a nice way of beginning. Next it says: "Honorable Mitchell Sharp, Minister of Trade and Commerce." Numbering myself among Mr. Sharp's admirers, I was surprised at this public announcement that he is honorable or that his first name is Honorable. "The Honorable," is an address, a title of office and courtesy. Honorable as officially used here is an adjective. It is like saying Honorable John Diefenbaker. So Honorable Mitchell Sharp is stuck with it, unless he is really H. Mitchell W. Sharp.

Page Two: a picture of the new office and the news that the Holiday Inn in Montreal is the largest Holiday Inn in the world. Index of copy for this story: 13. Page Three: a full-page advertisement for Holiday Inns in Montreal (two), St.

Johns, N.B., Dartmouth, N.S. and Quebec City. Page Four: six advertisements and the news that there is a "hotel, motel building boom in Canada." Seven inches of copy. Page Five: Full-page advertisement for N.S. Page Six: eight advertisements, one long shot of the Cabot Trail and 3 1/2 inches of copy.

And so on at the same level. But I did learn a number of important things on page eight. I learned what Allan Field, director of the Canadian Travel Bureau, looks like and that he was appointed in 1957. He was born in Toronto, once managed the bureau's New York office, was a member of the secretariat of the San Francisco Conference of the UN, secretary of the National Film Board and he worked—among other places—in the departments of the secretary of state and national health and welfare.

This should fill the Canadian resorts with New England tourists. Mr. Sharp gets 21 inches of copy—including a picture—in which his life story is briskly told. On the next page is a list of birthday excitements for July 1—the information is published for prospective visitors on June 23 so presumably the lines of traffic heading north are an instant response to this supplement—it says "to the skirts of bagpipes, young girls in traditional tartan dance the age-old dances of Scottish warriors." That sounds like a comment on Canadian women and I must remember to tell all my American friends that I have found their northern neighbors quite adequately feminine.

There is a total of 90 inches of copy (including heads) in this supplement devoted to boasting the irresistible attractions of Canada. There are an additional 40 inches devoted to the minister, the director and the present New York manager. It seems an unequal and unprofitable distribution of space.

I judge from what little copy there is that Canada produces newspaper and grain and is a territory of scattered local communities given to dressing up in fancy costumes belonging to the peoples of other countries. It does not say specifically that as you ride through their villages they will be laughing and dancing on the green, but it does say specifically that "representing the many ethnic origins of the people of Canada, consumed performers dance on the green lawns of Parliament Hill." There is the powerful impression in the whole production that all summer Canadians put on an unwholesome fancy dress caper for the passing tourist and in the winter go back to the axe and the wooden bucket and their European home industries.

There is also a peculiarly unfortunate sense of geography: "Visitors feast on lobster fresh-caught from the sea." It says of Nova Scotia to a people who have more seafood restaurants along any mile of shore than there are in all of Canada.

The next item in this birthday list is the Mine Dominion of Canada pageant at Niagara Falls, and then a "giant salmon barbecue at Campbell River, B.C." It is difficult not to see my neighbors doing the lobster in N.S., dashing 800 miles to Niagara for the fish, and taking off for B.C. for the salmon steaks.

There's a simple incompetence about the effort that may be very cunning. Everywhere in Canada, it seems, beaches are "uncrowded," so one does not expect sophisticated propaganda from a nation of lonely and isolated bumpkins, given in their childish way to dressing-up games. And the Canadian dollar costs less, an you can see them cheap.

With the Classics

Others may sing of the wine and the wealth and the mirth, The portly presence of potentes goodly in girth;— Mine be the dirt and the dross, the dust and the scum of the earth! Theirs be the music, the color, the glory, the gold; Mine be a handful of ashes, a mouthful of mould. Of the maimed, of the halt and the blind in the rain and the cold— Of these shall my songs be fashioned, my tales be told.

Visitors Bothered

YOUR city is as attractive as ever, but something should be done to curb the hucksters on the street leading to your city centre.

One is bothered by these aggressive and persistent attitudes in trying to sell tickets for this and that. Comment by visitors is not favorable that the authorities permit such a condition, making Victoria a sort of Corey Island.

Otherwise a visit to your city is a pleasant experience. The stores are excellent and the help most courteous.

Ottawa Blamed

I feel very strongly re our provincial mini-medicaid. Very good as far as it goes, but not all good, in that it does not go far enough. No coverage for optical, dental or drug expenses. I am sure we would rather pay a few dollars more and have complete care.

The Hall report, for which the taxpayers have already paid, gives a complete plan, but Ottawa has stalled. I expect deliberately, until the provinces have each a provincial mini-medicaid going. Then "it will be unnecessary," will be the excuse. Probably this was the underlying reason we spent so many months on a flag design. I note many clergymen demonstrated against the medicare plan in Ontario, for the same reason.

This deliberate delay by the federal government has left us no choice. We should all write to Ottawa before signing up and ask when the complete plan is to be made public, so long promised. The health department seems like a cackling hen, which makes terrific noise, and produces nothing. Wake up, citizens of B.C., and realize that it is fool's gold we are about to grasp.

A Disgrace

The government of this country supposedly represents the Canadian people. The failure of our government to accord the British Chancellor of the Exchequer the courtesy of being properly received upon his arrival here reflects upon the Canadian people and is a disgrace to Canada.

It would seem we do not have diplomats in Canada, merely parish pump politicians whose behavior can only be excused on the grounds of appalling ignorance, otherwise the slight to Mr. Callaghan was a deliberate insult.

Whisker's Story

I would like to add a little to the story of "Whiskers."

Every school morning for the past year when I passed the Songhees Indian School, I have been very touched to see Whiskers patiently waiting in front of the school for the school teacher to arrive on the 8:10 bus at the corner of Craigflower and Admirals Road. He would trot along the side of the road to meet her and what a welcome he gave her with his tail just wagging, and she loved him and patted him and they walked the short distance to the school side by side with her hand through his collar. This tender scene every morning showed he was a real, friendly dog.

I read in The Colonist where the school was being closed and the teacher retiring at the end of June. Whiskers didn't know this. Faithful as he was he waited just the same for his teacher friend to arrive.

One morning I missed him—I will continue to miss him as I am sure many other motorists in the area will and to me he seemed very traffic wise. Not once did I see him on the road.

Ferry Fares

I think most of your readers appreciate your sterling efforts on behalf of the population of Victoria and Vancouver Island. You are always very active and right behind any good cause.

But may I be allowed to say that in your efforts to have the ferry fares reduced I think you are away off base! Of course, like most people I like to get something for nothing or as near that price as one can get and like many others if you can get the fares down low enough I would spend all my spare time on the water just travelling back and forth whenever the sun shone. But please remember that the government needs revenue and if they did not make the ferries pay there would be a protest from many who do not use the ferries.

Please remember that more money must be spent on our hospitals, the standard at Crease Clinic is not as high as it was ten years ago, and then welfare needs more money and certainly education suffers from lack of funds at the university level. The library at UBC was supposed to be sufficient for 5,000 students and I think the number is now 15,000. Many books are placed on reserve and a student can only get the book for two hours at a time and then he is not allowed to take it out of the library. This library at Victoria

College is a joke. Students run all over town to get reference books and often have to go to St. Ann's to get a certain book. The ferries are B.C.'s best advertisement but you can not keep up the standard without money—even now the coffee is not as good as when the ferries started up and there are a few chief stewards who should be paid off, for they try to close the restaurant three-quarters of an hour before we get to port.

Also, remember, we do not wish to run the Air Canada out of Victoria.

Too Expensive

Among the projects submitted for Victoria's Centennial Commission consideration is a planetarium.

Such structures, with educational aims, erected at two or three world fairs, etc., are not only very costly, but of a temporary nature. After a year or so, they cease to excite interest or serve any useful community purpose.

Suitable astrophysical films and illustrated text books are always available, and people may visit our astrophysical observatory to acquire such knowledge.

Cause to Smile

The good Lord only knows what we will be paying for potatoes in the future! Right now I am paying $14 per 100 pounds by buying the five-pound bags in the stores. Since this new-fangled bag has appeared I almost think we should tremble. After all, the "lovely apud" is one of the mainstays of life.

However, if the federal ban on export means only that Vancouver Islanders can eat their own crops at least we consumers living on this favored isle can smile.

Parent's View

After reading the article in your July 7th edition entitled, "Parents Push Children to Drugs," I can't help but write and give my opinion from a parent's viewpoint. Who is putting the pressure on our children? Is it our society or is it our educational system? I grant there are the parents who push their children but I believe to the majority group who feel that we as parents are pressured into pressuring our children to make them study beyond their capacity for learning. School days 25 years ago were carefree days. Homework in the lower grades was unheard of. Today from Grade 4 up the children walk, not skip, home with half an hour to two hours' homework. Many times the first words upon entering the home are, "I can't find the answer to these questions" or "I don't understand!" and when a parent sits down to help them both child and parent become frustrated as even the adult has difficulty finding and working out the answer. As far as I'm concerned the new curriculum is far too restrictive. I would rather have my average intelligent child learn the three R's the old-fashioned, slow way and remain a carefree child than to see them struggle to understand this new system and become worried wrecks. I do wonder sometimes if the professors who thought up this new system of learning have geniuses for children or if they have any children at all.

I believe in progress but not to the extent the educators are changing the methods of teaching in our elementary schools.

Miss Pemberton

Miss Evelyn Pemberton, RN, was a delightful person to know, and such a fine example of the strong character united with charm and purpose of so many of the hardy pioneers of this area.

Apart from the relatives you mention, who survive her, there are also Massey Pemberton and his two sons, David and Ronald.

Another cousin is Commander F. J. D. Pemberton, who is on the staff of His Excellency The Governor General of Canada, and Mrs. J. Moyle, at present in Europe.

Miss E. Pemberton was matron of the hospital in Halifax at the time of the great ship explosion there.

She told me she was walking into her bedroom when she saw the pillows on her bed move straight up to the ceiling and then fall again, and as they fell she heard the roar of the explosion.

Miss Pemberton was predeceased by Mr. Fred Pemberton's two elder boys, who were killed flying in the First War.

Just two months after the liberal wing in French politics had won a resounding victory in a plebiscite for a new constitution, the fate of the Second Empire was sealed 95 years ago today—in 1870—when the government decided to declare war on Prussia. This followed the publication by Bismarck of an altered version of the results of diplomatic talks at Ems. The French army was beaten in a few months. Napoleon III fled to England, and France had to cede Alsace and Lorraine to the German empire and pay an indemnity of 5,000,000,000 francs.

China Sets Out To Blacken Russia's Image

By K. C. THALER, from London

Communist China's anxiety to get the United States out of Viet Nam is being matched increasingly by Peking's determination to remove the last remnants of Soviet influence from southeast Asia.

China's anti-American designs in Asia have been discernible for some time, but lately its propaganda machine has been geared to an all-out effort to undermine Moscow's prestige in Asia.

Russia is now being accused of secretly passing to the United States detailed lists of its arms supplies to North Viet Nam, and of aligning its strategy with that of the United States behind the backs of its Communist friends and allies.

The enormity of the charge is self-evident and its potential damage to Russia incalculable. It is as if the United States accused Britain of co-operating secretly with Communist Viet Cong in South Viet Nam.

As in the past, Peking is using tiny Albania, its staunchest ally, as the mouthpiece for its attacks on the Soviet Union.

Albania in its official organ has gone on repeating the charges against the Kremlin's alleged ganging up with the American "imperialists."

The Russians seem helpless against this type of campaign. All they have been able to do is to reiterate their willingness to help the North Vietnamese.

An even tougher battle is being waged currently in the diplomatic sphere, in Hanoi itself.

Diplomatic reports from the North Vietnamese capital say Peking is pushing openly for the elimination of what remains of Soviet political influence over the regime of Ho Chi Minh.

Without really giving North Viet Nam a great deal of concrete aid, Peking has managed to intimidate the North Vietnamese government sufficiently to counteract politically the more sizable Soviet assistance.

The Kremlin staged a comeback in Hanoi earlier this year when its leaders flew there for confidential talks. But the success was short-lived. Despite the fact that Soviet supplies have since been stepped up, Moscow's political influence in Hanoi is waning again.

The latest indications from Peking point to Red China's firm determination to eradicate Russian influence from Southeast Asia and, more immediately, to prevent the Soviets from establishing themselves in Viet Nam as either a political or military factor.

This is yet another reason why Red China is opposing a Viet Nam peace conference. Peking fears Russia would play a key role at the conference table, along with the United States and it does not want Russia to become once again one of the major guarantors of a political settlement of Southeast Asia, as it was at the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina.

NDP List Reforms—and Waits

Trick Is to Get Elected!

By IAN STREET

An important part of the NDP's "new dimension in government" policy statement last week was a list of proposed legislative reforms.

This is a subject on which NDP speakers each session get hot under the collar and talk a great deal about without achieving anything worthwhile.

But no one who observes the House in action would seriously argue that we don't need legislative reforms.

Just where these reforms should be introduced and what form they should take, of course, is what all the argument is about.

But the NDP, in its latest policy statement, has outlined the changes it would make if returned as government in the next election.

There would be a Hansard to provide a full printed record of all proceedings in the House.

This would be an excellent innovation. But it's one that the present government has consistently opposed over the years.

The NDP would introduce a record of debates and proceedings, the policy statement says, number of seats reduced from the present 52 to 48 using as his basis the proposed federal riding changes in B.C.

Under his proposal, still not anything like a final word on this subject from the government, each of 23 new federal ridings would have two MLAs and a new two-seat Peace River riding would be created on the provincial scene.

To eliminate "the undue influence of wealth," the NDP would place what it terms reasonable limitations on campaign spending.

These limitations, so vaguely defined in the policy statement, would apply to candidates in both provincial and municipal elections.

Premier Bennett has said that he would like to see the

They would also cover operations of central party organizations in provincial contests. All candidates and parties would be required to submit detailed, audited statements of campaign expenditures.

There would be a general lowering of the voting age to 18 with the right to vote in municipal elections being extended to all those eligible to vote in provincial elections.

A permanent register of voters would be set up in an attempt to remove yet another perennial cause of dissatisfaction. And the NDP promises to pass legislation making it an offence for any employer to discriminate in any way against an employee seeking government office.

The trick, of course, is first to get elected with sufficient seats to form a government.

Premier Bennett would introduce any or all of these measures if he thought the voters wanted them badly enough — and the NDP has learned this by bitter experience. It's the waiting that's hardest.

BACKGROUND

German Teachers Go 'Right'

By STERLING HAPPEY, from Cologne

An increasing number of German grade school teachers are joining far rightist political parties, and many go even further and accept offices in extremist groups, according to a German intelligence source.

The source, who is with the Office for Protection of the constitution, said these developments are being watched closely by his organization.

The drift toward the radical right is not yet a rush, he said in the exclusive interview. But, it is quite worrisome, especially in north Germany where teachers seem more susceptible to the pleas of such groups as the far rightist National Democratic Party (NPD) whose headquarters is in Hanover in Lower Saxony.

Nazi organizations found favor among teachers 30 years ago, and to many teachers Hitler was a hero.

Education in Germany is a state project. This makes it difficult for a federal office, such as the constitution office to be as effective as it might. Instead of trying to keep a close check on every rightist-minded teacher, the office centres its attention on political groups the teachers are joining.

The intelligence source declined to give figures indicating the degree of rightist penetration. He would say only that the number of teachers going over to the far right is "large and growing."

The number was said to be proportionately much larger than the number of other professional people, such as lawyers or doctors, who are changing their political hats.

Many teachers are chairmen of local NPD chapters and others are helping to organize chapters.

Teachers are looked upon as two-edged swords by neo-fascist organizers. In rural communities, teachers are among village leaders and therefore exert influence on older Germans. At the same time teachers are influential among students and young people.

"The local attitude," the intelligence officer said, "is, 'if your teacher joins a party there can not be much wrong with the party.'"

Viet Cong Lifelines Crude But Ingenious

By ARTHUR J. DOMMEN, from Saigon

The soldiers of the Viet Cong fields into the caches deep in their secure base areas. They arrange clandestine landings of key heavy weapons at sheltered coves along hundreds of miles of Vietnamese coastline and co-ordinate their distribution to units inland.

They operate jungle rest camps along the Laos border and supervise a network of local guides to bring into South Viet Nam fresh troops from the north.

Some are couriers operating in and out of Viet Cong controlled areas. They ride civilian buses between towns and even in and out of Saigon. When they pass government checkpoints they conceal their messages or slip them into secret "mail boxes" where another courier knows where to find them.

After each harvest in the Mekong delta thousands of tons of rice disappear from government stores. Actually it does not vanish; but a boatman paddling his sampan loaded with rice along a canal for turnover to the Viet Cong looks just like a boatman whose load is consigned to a merchant in Saigon. A good sampan can carry up to half a ton of rice. It does not take many to move 100 tons.

The French planned to "asphyxiate" guerrillas by bombing roads and trails that constituted the Viet Minh supply lines. Instead of being asphyxiated, the Viet Minh responded by recruiting large numbers of coolies to repair at night damage done by French bombers during the day.

In some cases, the Viet Minh simply hacked alternate supply routes through the jungle parallel to roads. But they made use of roads where they could.

Photos taken by French reconnaissance planes over route 3 in autumn, 1952, are proof of the incredible tenacity of the Viet Minh. This road served as one of the principal axes of transport for the Viet Minh across the China border after Mao-Tse-Tung's takeover.

Then the dry season signalled the start of French ground offensives elsewhere and planes were assigned to other missions. With in two months Route 3 was completely patched up and the rate of flow of goods was back to its earlier level.

Two low-level photos of section of a road in a narrow river valley show it cut in a dozen places by landslides triggered by bombings and then repaired like new. In neither photo do human beings appear. Yet the two photos were taken only 15 days apart.

The French figured the average Viet Minh soldier carried three kilograms of rice slung around his neck. This constituted four days' ration when supplemented by locally procured salt. Today the same rice slings appear around the necks of Viet Cong. They're kept filled from stockpiles in the forest.

By and large the Viet Cong use the same methods of transportation, supply and communications as did the Viet Minh.

For local purposes, water buffaloes, of which there are millions in South Viet Nam, serve well as transporters.

There also have been reports from time to time that the Viet Cong have mobilized elephants to transport supplies.

Pedestrians Get Right-of-Way

BERLIN (Reuters) — Pedestrians have absolute priority at marked street crossings, even when they are drunk and crawling on all fours, a West Berlin court ruled Wednesday.

The court gave a suspended prison term and a fine to a driver who ran over and killed a 77-year-old drunk as he was crawling across an intersection earlier this year.

Incredible Goings-On

Soil Alive-O

By GEORGE GETZE

Science has estimated that it would take 200,000 bacteria of average size to cover the period at the end of this sentence.

Sir John Russell, vice-president of the Royal Agricultural Society, says there are about 3,000,000 bacteria in one gram of ordinary soil, and that the bacteria in the top six inches of an acre of grassland probably would weigh about four tons if they could be gathered together in a lump.

Russell's estimates of the almost unbelievable number of living things in the soil are contained in a report of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

He said no matter how unlikely a habitat a handful of sand, silt and clay appear to be, it is the home of an astounding number of fungi, algae and three kinds of tiny invertebrate animals, the protozoa, nematodes and arthropods.

These three are the smallest, most numerous and most active forms of life in the soil, and consume more food and oxygen than the other organisms. Nematodes are counted in the millions. Russell said there can be as many as 17,000,000 in a square yard of soil, mostly in the top four inches.

The most common arthropods are mites and springtails, primitive segmented insects. The mites vary in size. Between 12,000 and 100,000 could be held in one drop of water, Russell said. The springtails are fewer but are most interesting because of their antiquity.

They are survivors of the days before insects had developed wings. Russell said a fossil springtail has been found in 300-million-year-old rocks. That is about 45,000,000 years before the first winged insects appeared.

So all these organisms, plus the larger ones humans can see, can live in the soil they must have space, air, water, food, the right temperature and enough safety to allow them to mature and reproduce.

All these conditions are met by the decayed plant material in the soil and the physical properties of the soil itself, Russell said.

He reported that from 80 per cent to 97 per cent of dry soil is mineral particles from the weathering and disintegration of rocks. The largest of these are sand, the next largest are silt, and the smallest are clay.

"Clay is colloidal and is a powerful absorber of water," Russell said. "Light sandy soil contains only about three per cent to five per cent water, and easily workable loam about 15 per cent. A heavy clay can contain 50 or even 70 per cent water."

Russell said the particles of sand, silt and clay do not normally remain separate, but build up into crumbs that are honey-combed with cells and passages.

"It's not known how this comes about," he said, "but organic matter from plants, plant roots, earthworms, other soil organisms and the chemical properties of the clay play parts in crumb formation."

"It is one of nature's most vital processes. Without crumbs, plants could not grow, and most soils would long ago have been blown away by the wind or washed away by water."

Zinc Tops

B.C. Metal

Production

Mineral production in B.C. jumped 4.4 per cent in 1964 to a record high value of more than $267,000,000, said mines minister Donald Brokensha Wednesday.

The $11,300,000 boost over 1963 figures was reported in the annual statement of production from the department of mines and petroleum resources.

"Quantities of several metals were somewhat less than in 1963, but good prices for silver, copper, lead and zinc and for several by-product metals, gave an overall increase for metals."

"Values for each of the other groups, industrial minerals, structural minerals and fuels also exceeded 1963 values. The value for structural minerals was 11 per cent higher than in 1963 and natural gas increased 18.7 per cent."

Zinc led the production value list in 1964 with $58,648,561 value followed by lead ($38,402,283) and copper ($38,693,136).

Oil production dropped almost 1,000,000 barrels to 12,474,054 barrels worth $24,047,837.

TIVERTON, R.I. — Unlike lightning, a car driven by Joseph Keogh, 19, of Tiverton struck the same power pole twice. Police said when Keogh's car struck the pole three months ago, it only cracked it at the base. But this time, they said, he knocked it down. Keogh was not seriously hurt in either crash.

Gastritis? Not Likely!

SWANSEA, Wales (UPI) — A physician says that the complaint usually recorded as "gastritis" which kept as many as one-third of Britain's miners from working effectively on Monday mornings actually was a hangover from weekend consumption of beer.

Mole Gets Deeper

Massive excavation that will hold foundation of new B.C. Museum and Archives building at Belleville and Government grows deeper daily as trucks haul away shattered rock. Thatcher Woos American Investors

NEW YORK (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan urged American business executives Wednesday to increase their investments in Canada and promised that they will be given "every opportunity to make a fair profit."

"Canadians owe much to American investment," the premier told a luncheon sponsored jointly by the International Executives Association and the New York Board of Trade. "Not only do we welcome American investment, we are absolutely dependent on it."

Thatcher, in New York on a three-day business trip, received a standing ovation from the 100 executives after concluding his address which also touched on high American tariffs on Canadian goods and on the business opportunities in Saskatchewan after the defeat of the CCF government.

"COMPLETE MONOPOLY"
The Saskatchewan government had a "complete monopoly in the production of timber" until a few months ago, said Thatcher, whose Liberal party defeated the CCF a year ago after it had been in office for 20 years.

The new administration has discontinued this monopoly, said the premier. "We are encouraging private enterprise to come into our timber limits. We are providing incentives for them to do so."

The Liberal premier, who quit the CCF party in 1955, said the former socialist government in Saskatchewan was responsible for "industrial stagnation, retarded development, oppressive taxation and major depopulation."

Thatcher then warned the executives about the danger from

Sheppard Loses Appeal Doctor in Prison

CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI) — A U.S. federal court Wednesday ordered Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard returned to prison for killing his pregnant wife and the state said it hoped to put him behind bars next week.

The U.S. 6th circuit court of appeals joined Sheppard again in his 11-year fight for freedom by refusing to reconsider its May 5 order overturning a federal district court which released Dr. Sheppard on grounds he did not receive a fair trial.

WILL APPEAL
Ohio Atty. General William Saxbe announced in Columbus he would oppose any effort to permit the handsome 43-year-old osteopathic brain surgeon to remain free on bond during the several months his expected appeal would be in the U.S. supreme court.

Sheppard's attorney, F. Lee Bailey of Boston, was cruising off the New England coast but was expected to return in time to file the notice of appeal before next Wednesday's deadline. The court would then decide whether Sheppard remains free on bond or is returned to prison during the appeal.

HORSES DISAPPEAR
West German statistics show there are only 373,000 horses still at work on farms, as opposed to 519,000 in 1950.

5,700,000-Acre Area

Company Gains Access

Representatives of two giant forest product companies joined B.C. forests minister Ray Williston to sign an agreement Wednesday giving Bulkley Valley Pulp and Timber Ltd. access to pulpwood in a 5,700,000-acre area surrounding the town of Houston in west-central B.C. A 600-ton-per-day pulp mill worth $50,000,000 is to be constructed, beginning in 1968 or 1969, somewhere in the area — most likely at Houston.

Final decision on the site of the mill depends on a number of factors including availability of power, said spokesmen for Bulkley Valley Pulp and Timber Ltd. They recently joined "in equal partnership to take a major controlling interest in Bulkley Valley Pulp and Timber Ltd."

The mill, which must be completed by 1971, will produce either kraft liner board or sulphate pulp, said R. A. Irwin, Bulkley Valley president. He did not rule out the possibility that final construction will result in relocation of the millsite possibly to Smithers or the Bulkley Lake area. Houston was described as the "logical place for the mill if all the present problems are resolved" in the manner expected.

Forestry officials said about 1,500,000 acres of the Bulkley area is considered productive in terms of pulp.

"We are all happy Bowaters and Bathurst have seen fit to come to B.C. to engage in our forest industry. It has been a long courtship that has been going on for years and just now has come to fruition," said forests minister Ray Williston after signing the agreement.

Peace Council

Russians, Chinese Feud On

By SAM HILL

HELSINKI (Reuters) — Chinese Communist delegates fought a losing battle Wednesday trying to break Soviet leadership at the World Peace Council Congress meeting here.

Despite fierce Chinese objections, a Soviet-backed resolution endorsing peaceful co-existence between East and West was adopted by a working committee. It will be presented to the final plenary session today.

MAY WALK OUT

The series of defeats for the Chinese delegation led to reports it might walk out of the final session in protest against the council's undemocratic structure.

Some 1,500 delegates, representing 25 countries including Canada have been attending the World Peace Council's first congress since 1962. From the opening session Saturday, Soviet and Chinese delegates have clashed openly on a number of issues.

CHINESE ATTACK

Wednesday's debate was marked by a sharp Chinese attack on Soviet author Ilya Ehrenburg for being the "instigator of a mendacious and changes which the Chinese do not like."

SHAPED AT CHINESE

The Soviet writer, whose amendments were approved, snapped at the Chinese delegate: "We are not 10-year-old children."

The Chinese delegates also turned on the United States chairman of the working committee, Carlton Goodlet. When a Peking delegate protested at length the committee was failing to listen to the Chinese views, Goodlet rapped his gavel and told the delegate: "Sit down."

First Lady of the Alps Beats Men on Matterhorn's North Wall

ZERMATT, Switzerland (Reuters)—A woman climber reached the summit of the 14,774-foot Matterhorn for the first time today by scaling the treacherous north wall. Mrs. Michel Vaucher, 27, wife of a Swiss guide, had jumped the gun on more than 60 mountaineers and guides who began an ascent of the mist-shrouded peak at dawn Tuesday. Mrs. Vaucher's ascent marked the first time a woman has reached the peak via the overhanging north face. The Swiss woman, her husband and a local guide had been due to leave this morning as part of a televised multiple-climb, celebrating the centenary of the first ascent of the Matterhorn by Edward Whymper of Britain. But Mrs. Vaucher, whose first name is Yvette, gained a head start by setting out Tuesday and was reported on her way down by the easier Noermli ridge. Ian McNaught Davis, British climber leading the official television assault party on the Noermli ridge, reported he met the Vaucher group coming down at about 12,400 feet. They had been to the summit earlier this morning, after spending the night on the north wall. Davis reported he had given Mrs. Vaucher a victory kiss and told millions of European television viewers: "She's a sweet thing."

Mrs. Vaucher and her husband were to have been one of three two-man teams setting out this morning to climb the north wall. The third team, Italian climber Ettore Bich and Swiss guide Paul Etter changed plans and were instead climbing up the Furggrat, a difficult ridge to the right of the north wall.

Rope Submitted In Murder Case

By GEOFFREY MINIAN

Who owned the rope that bound Susan Franchi's wrists? The question arose in Colwood magistrate's court Wednesday, second day of the preliminary hearing into the capital murder charge against David Leonard Robinson, 24, of 324 Old Island Highway.

Susan's naked and battered body was found May 12 lying face downward in woods near her home at 2637 Chilco, Langford.

Witnesses recalled a fatal date on the jacket and found a small rock found about six inches from the girl's head and discovered traces of Group A blood on it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bigelow, Mrs. Simonsen said that about 42 per cent of people belong to the A blood group.

She had been given no blood or sperm samples from Robinson to test, she said.

Another witness, Dr. James Portelance, 222 Glen Lake, said he had examined Susan's body around 3 p.m. on May 12.

He estimated the length of time she had been dead as anywhere between six and 24 hours.

Two cadets training at HMCS Venture, John Megson and Jack Koul, testified that on the evening of May 11 they had hitched a ride in a station wagon from the corner of Admirals Road and Craigflower.

They said the driver, whom they identified as Robinson, dropped them at the Six Mile House, 494 Island Highway, then drove off back along Craigflower.

Neither was able to say what time in the evening they had been given the lift.

George Laak, manager of the Halfway House, 656 Esquimalt, said Robinson had been under contract there as a part-time

'Don't Halt Beautification'

Planning Hassle Unimportant Clack Tells City

By A. H. MURPHY
City Hall Reporter

Neither his resignation nor the city hall hassle which preceded it is important now, said planner Rudi Clack Wednesday on his departure from Victoria.

What is vital is that there be no interruption in the municipal beautification program.

The thrust and parry of the controversy began two weeks ago when the resignation of Mr. Clack, as head of the special projects division, was followed by that of his two assistants, Peter Atkin and Ted Parsons.

Discord, which has been smouldering for years, broke out into the open at an explosive meeting last Friday at which charges and counter-charges were flung.

THREE RESIGNED

Upshot was that the resignations of all three planners were accepted by city council and the city manager Dennis Young, along with City Engineer James Gamett, both of whom figured in the dispute, were given votes of confidence by aldermen.

Since then several city organizations including the Community Planning Association have strongly protested the loss of the planners.

However, the temperature at city hall has subsided in the past few days and Wednesday Mr. Clack said that it took second place now to the fact of continuity in the municipal planning program.

HOPES TO HELP

Before his departure for Ottawa where he will collect and co-relate information on municipal planning for the federal centennial commission, Mr. Clack said he hopes to have a hand in the implementation of plans now on the drawing boards for Victoria.

"Concepts such as those for Bastion Square and the View Street shopping mall are still in the heads of us who planned

Tourist Season Can't Wait

Promoter Defies Rule, Replacing Road Signs

By IAN SMITH

The Saanich sign issue boiled over again Wednesday as Alf Pettersen, operator of Wooded Wonderland, claimed a restrictive municipal bylaw is driving his operation into the red.

Other operators of tourist businesses seemed in agreement that the sign regulations are unnecessarily restrictive. They attended a council meeting on the issue Monday.

Mr. Pettersen saw red—financially and figuratively—after officials took down a sign north of his property. The sign reads: "Wooded Wonderland, Turn Left 300 Yards."

"No person should be forced to obey an unreasonable law," said Mr. Pettersen, and promptly moved ahead with plans to replace the sign.

"If they want to take me to court, fine," he stated, "but I can't operate Wooded Wonderland without that sign."

He claimed that signs make a 30 per cent difference in his profits.

"And that's a big difference, let me tell you," he said heatedly. "It's the difference between operating in the red and in the black."

"If I have to operate without the sign, I might as well close down."

He said he would look for other sites for his operation.

Battle Every Year

"I'm plain fed up. Every year I've had a battle with somebody about this. I'm beginning to think that this city does not want any tourist attractions here."

"I appreciate the idea behind the sign bylaw, but I feel that an amendment should be made in the case of tourist businesses. The tourist just can't be forced to spend his time searching for places to go; there are enough attractions in other municipalities that can claim his attention."

He pointed out that the bylaw appeared to be discriminatory, in that it is so worded that signs that were up before the bylaw came into force two years ago are allowed to remain up.

This means that such established attractions as the Butchart Gardens can advertise with outdoor signs.

Mr. Pettersen wrote to the council about the matter on June 22, but has yet to receive an answer to his request for permission to erect the two four-by-five-foot signs at each end of his establishment.

"There won't be another council meeting now for three weeks," he said, "and I can't wait that long. The tourist season will be over half gone by then."

"A business without a sign is a sign of no business."

"I can't afford to take this lying down."

Saanich does permit small directional signs, but it was generally agreed by council and operators that these were ineffective.

Yes! was the joyous response from New Brunswick and the letters continued their delayed journey to New Victoria Fire Department, New Victoria, Cape Breton.

Franklin White, with one-armed ease, shows proper position to Paul Blakey.

He Builds an Athlete, Then Moulds an Artist

By TONY DILLON-DAVIS

Bringing ballet to the common man, and teaching him how to enjoy it, is the way Royal Ballet dancer Franklin White spends his holidays.

The English dancer is teaching a six-week course on ballet to Victoria students. After the course he will do a lecture tour of the east coast, then return to the Royal Ballet.

Mr. White has lived and breathed ballet since 1933, but it is only during the past 15 years that he has evolved his system of lecture tours.

During the winter he is a featured dancer with the world-famous Royal Ballet, working with the cream of ballet—Rudolf Nureyev and Dame Margot Fonteyn.

He spends his spare time talking to the public, changing many preconceived ideas about ballet.

For instance, there is the myth which states that most ballet dancers are "sissies."

"I especially like lecturing before a group of teenage boys, father, but I can run circles around them. A dancer has to be in top shape," Mr. White said Wednesday.

At a lecture, Mr. White, who is 42, strides on stage in ordinary street clothes.

"It is very important to show up looking like a normal human being."

He talks for a while about some aspect of ballet. Then he pulls off his jacket and tie and throws himself into the dance.

He says ballet is "first an athletic craft, later it may become art."

"All ballet dancers are athletes."

What does he see in Victoria's artistic future?

"I am interested in seeing what could be done here."

"Victoria is a superb spot for here, and artists like to work in beautiful surroundings."

Mr. White will dance at a special program at the McPherson Playhouse Aug. 18.

'Years Off My Life'

by Barry Goldwater's support from the right wing.

Stevenson took his lumps at the UN. Perhaps his worst period was during the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in 1961 which also handed President Kennedy his first big setback. Stevenson had a hard case to defend in the eyes of many and he made it worse by being fed faulty information, which Cuba's Fidel Castro and the Soviet Union gleefully pounced on.

On the Dominican crisis, Schoenbrun said Stevenson made his "massive blunder" statements Friday at a Paris dinner with him and roving Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, who was en route to Moscow.

Schoenbrun quoted Stevenson as saying: "For six weeks, I had to sit there in the United Nations and defend the policy of my country in Santo Domingo although it was a massive blunder from beginning to end."

Schoenbrun said Harriman interrupted, insisting that Stevenson could not mean what he was saying, and that it was no blunder "to eliminate a Castro Communist influence."

But Stevenson, Schoenbrun reported, declared that his innermost conviction was that there was no fixed danger of a Communist takeover, and that he "could never quite believe what he was called upon to say."

"I can tell you this, Averell," Schoenbrun quoted Stevenson as saying, "that six weeks in the UN took several years off my life."

Clayton Fritchey, long time associate and advisor to Stevenson, told a reporter at the United Nations he had never heard Stevenson utter such statements, publicly or privately, as those Schoenbrun attributed to him. Fritchey said Stevenson "vigorously defended U.S. policies."

Prime Minister Pearson, visibly shaken Wednesday, was informed in Ottawa of the death of Stevenson.

The prime minister spoke of his deep grief and shock at the loss in London of "a very old and very close personal friend."

He said: "It is hard to exaggerate the importance of Adlai Stevenson to the free world or to his country during the last 15 or 20 years."

Other Canadian comment included:

External Affairs Minister Martin, from his Windsor, Ont., hospital bed where he is confined with a back injury:

"I'm so numb, I can't believe it. The world has lost its most articulate voice for peace, order and good government. I have lost a friend. The U.N. has lost one of its greatest champions. To the president and people of the United States I express my deepest sympathies on the loss of this great public servant."

U.S. Ambassador W. Walter Butterworth, called his death "an untimely blow."

"He was so widely respected and, in fact, beloved that many thousands of people throughout the world will regret his passing and will miss his presence in the United Nations which he supported so ardently."

NDF Leader T. C. Douglas announced the death to the party's federal convention in Toronto.

He said the death was a "shock to all who remember his brilliant campaigns for the presidency of the United States."

"On those occasions he brought to the political arena a first-class intellect and a refreshing new approach to public issues."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said the death "is a great loss for all who love freedom."

"Stevenson was one of the great leaders of democracy and freedom. Even though he was twice turned down for the presidency he continued to serve not only his own country but free men everywhere."

"Mr. Stevenson was a man of wide scholarship and possessed a good experience in practical politics as governor of his state. He brought to bear in international politics his experience and good sense which were always marked by a sense of humor."

Stevenson Funeral At Springfield?

CHICAGO (UPI)—Adlai E. Stevenson III said Wednesday funeral service for his father probably will be held in Springfield, Ill., where he served as Governor of Illinois for four years.

Burial will be in Bloomington, Ill., long Stevenson's home town, the son said.

The young Stevenson, now a Chicago attorney and Illinois assemblyman, said in a statement, "Many throughout the world know my father through his public career."

"But I was privileged to know him as the most loving, devoted father a son could have. My brothers and I share a loss and bear a grief which is beyond measure."

A spokesman for young Stevenson said President Johnson was sending a plane to Chicago to pick up Adlai III and a brother.

The spokesman said Stevenson's brother-in-law, Ernest Ives, has been notified of the ambassador's death in Florence, Italy, where he and Stevenson's sister are vacationing. The sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Ives, was not immediately notified, but was expected to travel to London, the spokesman said.

Stevenson

rank of ambassador as U.S. representative on the UN trusteeship council and had also been in Geneva.

Mrs. Tree, long a friend of Stevenson, got down on her hands and knees and tried to revive him with mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

James Yates, doorman at the International Sportsmen's Club, rushed out.

Mrs. Tree told Yates who Stevenson was, and the doorman ran to the U.S. embassy.

Yates told reporters:

SAW HIM FALL
"I saw him fall. He was with a woman. She rushed up to me and said, 'quick, come. Could you come at once and help?'"

"I rushed down and felt the back of his head, but he was not bleeding. I rushed to Governor House (a hotel) to phone for a doctor, but then another doctor was trying artificial respiration. The lady (Mrs. Tree) had started to give him the kiss of life."

DOCTOR CALLED
A doctor was called from the sportsmen's club. He gave Stevenson an injection and administered heart massage.

An embassy spokesman said he did not know where Stevenson was going when he collapsed.

John Farr, superintendent of a nearby building, said he saw Mrs. Tree, dressed in a turquoise suit, comforting Stevenson on the sidewalk. Yates dropped a coat under Stevenson's head.

GIVE OXYGEN
When an ambulance arrived, the crew brought out an oxygen cylinder and gave oxygen to Stevenson for about five minutes.

"He was put on a stretcher and carried into the ambulance," Farr said. "The lady in blue went with him."

Mainland Trip Planned

SHAWNIGAN—The young participants of this year's Children's International Summer Village at the Strathcona Lodge School here will be treated by the provincial government to a free trip to Vancouver, August 10, said village director John Berges Wednesday.

The children's village with 32 youngsters from eight countries opened today. On their government-paid trip to Vancouver, children will be accompanied by four teenage junior counselors and 10 adults.

They will leave Shawnigan by bus and will go to Vancouver via Nanaimo. They will return via Tsawwassen. Highlights of the visit to the mainland city will be a tour through Stanley Park and a sightseeing trip.

UN Licks Souvenir Stamp Plot

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The UN post office said Tuesday it has foiled a plot to corner the market on a souvenir UN stamp issue. The unidentified philatelic speculators stood to make an enormous profit had they succeeded, officials said.

The stamp issue is a 20-cent commemorative sheet put out for "International Co-operation Year" on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the United Nations.

D. Thomas Clements, chief of the UN postal administration in New York, said large and repetitive mail orders for the sheets were such that, had they been filled, "the market would have been cornered by a group or groups for their own personal profit."

The orders were limited to five sheets a customer. Clements told a reporter that if the buyers in question had got all the sheets they ordered and had been able to work as a group, they could just about have set their own selling price.

He said about 3,200 orders for 50 sheets each came in from seven different states by identical mimeographed letters signed by names that followed a regular alphabetical pattern.

In addition, he said, there were orders for 10,000, 50,000 and 100,000 sheets, and one telephone caller asked for half a million. But, he said, "they didn't get away with it."

THE GREATEST SELECTION IN THE WEST AT WOODWARD'S FOOD FLOORS

All Smiles Now at Village

By IAN SMITH

The children's international summer village has had its troubles, but it was strictly smiles and fun Wednesday as the youngsters continued to arrive from foreign lands.

The scene at the Victoria International Airport at Patricia Bay was typical, and the airport lived up to its title.

For international goodwill was evident in massive doses as the 11-year-olds from Norway and Denmark stepped off the plane.

Waiting to greet them were Tracy Clark and Andrew Fetter of Victoria, two of the Canadian children going to the village.

They had met Japanese and Philippine delegates Tuesday.

They held the village's welcome banner proudly, but they couldn't out-smile their European counterparts.

The kids were having trouble talking, but the message was obviously coming through.

In the background stood Mrs. Agnes Fraser, chairman of the Vancouver Island chapter of the village organization, which is represented in 40 countries.

"We're here to promote understanding among peoples of the world," she commented, "and I think we're succeeding."

FINANCES

She may have been thinking of times a few weeks earlier, when the village was in financial trouble and the organizers were forced to seek assistance from local groups and agencies.

But they got their money, and no bysland at the airport Wednesday could deny that it was worthwhile.

In each delegation were four children and one adult.

CANADIANA

From Denmark came Per Knudsen, Erik Hansen, Sørensen, and Charlotte Grotved, under the care of Karen Kristiansen.

Ludwig Grotzer was in charge of the Norwegian youngsters. Per Danneberg, Torstein Wæhler, Elizabeth Dahn and Anne Grete Elstad.

They were dressed in their city best, but each had a characteristic hat. The Norwegians wore bright red togas, while the Danes had white sailor-type hats with bright red pom-poms.

OFF HOMES

They stretched their legs from the plane ride and then were whisked off to city homes for the day, prior to going to the village at Shawnigan Lake's Strathcona Lodge School.

At the village they will be joined by delegations of 11-year-olds from Japan, the Philippines, Mexico, Guatemala, and the United States.

The village will run until Aug. 4. During that time the children will live and play together, enjoying sports, activities and camaraderie.

OPEN HOUSE

Members of the public are invited to open houses, on the following Sundays: July 18 and 25 and Aug. 1.

This venture is one of nine similar villages to be held throughout the world this summer.

The village was founded by Dr. Doris Twitchell Allen, an American child psychologist, who organized the first village in Cincinnati in 1951.

Beached Whales Baffle Experts

MELBOURNE (AP)—Fisheries experts are trying to figure out what has caused more than 200 whales along two miles of ocean beach on the north-west coast of Eluder's Island. The island is 220 miles south-east of Melbourne in Bass Strait. The whales are black, 20 feet long and were discovered by a farmer during the weekend.

Second Rain Eases Drought

OTTAWA (CP)—The second general rain in less than a week further eased drought conditions in eastern Ontario and western Quebec Tuesday night.

Divers Get Cool Assignment

Six Esquimalt-based RCN divers have left on a real cool trip.

And they are bound to get a bang out of the work they will be doing.

Now that summer has come to the Dew Line the divers are needed to blast rock which have been left on beaches by the receding ice floes.

The resultant cleared passages will allow landing craft to make it to shore with supplies for the coming winter.

The annual job will take about six weeks.

The party flew from Victoria to Edmonton then north where they will look after the western half of the Arctic beaches.

Mistaken Shot Kills Korean

SEOUL (AP)—An American soldier on guard duty mistook a South Korean army private for a Communist infiltrator before dawn Wednesday and killed him, the U.S. Army announced. The two men were on guard duty together along the demilitarized zone about 20 miles northwest of Seoul. The U.S. Army said the Korean apparently strayed away from the guard post and was shot as he was making his way back.

Perhaps one can argue this film should never have been made. But no one can argue it could have been better made.

Pacifists' Letters Published

LONDON (AP)—Hitherto unpublished correspondence between Mahatma K. Gandhi and Albert Einstein has become public after nearly 34 years.

The famed physicist voiced approval of Gandhi's policy of non-violence. The Indian leader replied that Einstein's support gave him great consolation.

The letters were published in the Indian Weekly, an English-language publication for the Indian community in Britain.

NO VIOLENCE

Einstein wrote in October, 1931, the publication says:

"You have shown by all you have done that we can achieve the ideal even without resorting to violence. We can conquer those varieties of violence by the non-violent method. Your example will inspire and help humanity to put an end to a conflict based on violence with international help and co-operation guaranteeing peace to the world."

"With this expression of my devotion and admiration I hope to be able to meet you face to face."

THE REPLY

Gandhi replied Oct. 18, 1931: "I was delighted to have your beautiful letter. . . It is a great consolation to me that the work I am doing finds favor in your sight. I do indeed wish that we could meet face to face. . ."

The letter was written by Gandhi when he was in London, the Indian Weekly said. Einstein received the letter in Caputh, near Potsdam, Germany. It was found there by Dr. P. M. Friedmann, now a resident of London, when Einstein left Germany.

Garden Notes

Joy Without Cost

By M. V. CHESNUT

I suppose everybody likes to get something for nothing, and I think this may be especially true of gardeners. I know that even after years of growing things, I still get an unholly thrill out of acquiring a couple of choice flowering shrubs from bits and pieces stuck in the ground as slips—bits and pieces often scrounged or snaffled in a highly illegal fashion. Slips work fine with such easy-to-root things as Mock Orange or Honeysuckle. Many of our most treasured shrubs, though, are difficult to root as cuttings, and layering is a method which works much more surely—it is like taking a cutting but with a natal cord connecting child to mother until the baby is ready to be weaned. Very few plants will fail to root if a low-growing branch is pegged firmly into the soil and kept moist.

While the layering operation can be performed any time through the growing season, it is generally better and more convenient to do the job when the parent plant is growing strongly and the branch is flexible. With most shrubs, you find such conditions between May and the middle of August. When layering woody shrubs or vines, select a branch or shoot ranging between pencil thickness to 3/4 inch diameter, originating low down on the plant and growing out horizontally near the ground, well placed for burying its midsection in the soil.

At the point on the branch where you want it to grow some roots, remove all twigs and leaves, and with a sharp knife cut a notch into the underside of the branch and about halfway through. Then work the blade of the knife up into the head of the notch and split the branch toward its tip for a distance of two or three inches. Wedge a pebble into the split portion to keep it open, and your layer is ready for pegging down.

While you could bury the wounded portion "as is", it is better to scoop out a hole immediately below the notch and replace the native backyard dirt with a mixture more like houseplant potting soil—equal parts peat, sand and mellow loam works well. Press the layer well into this mixture and peg it down firmly with a couple of homemade wire "hairpins", or cover it with a heavy flat stone to hold it in place and to conserve moisture around the cut portion. It is a good idea, too, to prevent any movement while the roots are forming by staking and tying the free, unburied end of the layered branch.

Generally, the layers take from 12 to 15 weeks to root firmly, although this can be speeded up somewhat by dusting the cut surfaces with one of the hormone rooting powders such as Seradix, Stim-Root or Rootone. It is important that the soil mixture around the layer be kept moist, as the new roots emerging from the wounded portion of the branch would perish in a few hours in bone-dry conditions.

With any luck, the layered branch will have grown a nice set of roots by the end of the growing season, and next spring it may be severed from the parent plant. At a pinch, the new young shrub could be moved to its permanent position at the same time, but it is safer simply to cut the natal cord next spring, allowing the new shrub to become accustomed to living an independent existence before transplanting it in the fall.

ART BUCHWALD Jumps to Conclusions

Martians Have Plans, Too

When it was discovered via American and Soviet space probes, that there was indeed life on Mars, an immediate foreign ministers conference in Geneva was called to decide what to do about it.

The United States, through its secretary of state, announced that America had no territorial designs on the planet and the U.S. position was that the Martians should be free to choose their own government, providing of course that it was not Communist-dominated or leftist-inspired.

The Soviet minister said that if the Martians wanted to overthrow the reactionary rulers, who were probably exploiting the Martian masses, his country would have no choice but to come to their aid. He said that if the Martians requested it the Soviet Union would supply them with planes, rockets, and up-to-date radar.

The United States said that if the Soviet Union interfered it would have no choice but to send Marines to Mars to protect the lives of free Martians as well as American tourists who soon would be visiting there.

The real problem was that nobody knew what kind of government the Martians had.

All the photographs showed that there was life on Mars, but unfortunately there were no flags in the pictures to indicate where the Martians stood.

Both the Soviet Union and the United States were at a stalemate until someone came up with a brilliant solution.

Mars would be divided in half. The northern part would be known as North Viet Mars and the south would be known as South Viet Mars.

The Soviets would be in charge of the north, the U.S. in charge of the south, and free elections would be promised within two years of partition.

The United States immediately set up a Mars aid program to give the Martians economic and financial assistance when the time came. It also trained military assistance teams which would land with the aid people and train the Martians in defense against the north.

The Soviets divided North Viet Mars into communes and trained political commissars and technicians to go into the country and communize it.

In the meantime, Communist China, which had not been asked to the conference, started making its own plans for Mars. It announced an Afro-Asian-Mars Conference to take place in Peking, where both the Western "bandits" and Soviet "deviationists" would be attacked.

China said, as soon as it had enough space ships, it would send 1,000,000 Chinese volunteers to Mars to save the planet from American and Soviet imperialism.

Although the French had nothing to do with the space explorations, they insisted Mars should become part of a Third Force under the direction of Gen. de Gaulle.

Unbeknownst to the great powers on earth, the Martians were holding a summit meeting of their own on the Mars Bar Canal.

"Then it is agreed upon," the Grand Clyde of Mars Cimmerium said, "We shall set up an East Earth and a West Earth. We shall have the east and Trivium Charontis will have the West."

The Trivium Charontis Super Zlich said, "We shall hold elections within two years and let the Earth people decide for themselves what form of government they want."

"I cannot state strongly enough," said the Grand Clyde of Mars Cimmerium, "that if Trivium Charontis does anything to violate the treaty we will be forced to use all the weapons at our disposal."

"And I can assure you, Grand Clyde, Trivium Charontis will not stand by and see West Earthlings swallowed up by Mars Cimmerium. If need be we shall use the long."

The Grand Clyde said, "We shall see which system prevails."

SYDNEY HARRIS

Every informed person today regards narcotics addiction as a disease. To treat it as a crime is to perpetuate the hold of the underworld gangs on the desperate men and women who must get their daily dosage, no matter to what extremes it takes them.

A social problem of this magnitude should be taken out of the hands of policemen, politicians, and courts, and placed in the hands of the medical profession and the social services. The law is not equipped to deal with it, either in terms of physical resources or technical competence.

Dope addiction is not a crime; it leads to crime. The addict is a passive and receptive personality; he wants nothing but his fix. Denied it, and unable to get treatment, he is capable of turning into the most reckless of criminals.

The present system is worse than useless. When the addict is released from prison, he has no choice but to go back to his old way of life — to mugging, burglary, prostitution, and even murder under stress. He is in the grip of compulsion — both physical and psychic — that he cannot break without help, and usually does not want to break at all.

We used to treat the mentally disturbed as though they were criminals, or suffering for some sins they had committed. But 20th century techniques of psychotherapy, chemotherapy, and such, have redeemed many thousands of persons who otherwise would have languished behind bars for a lifetime. Mental illness is no longer considered a "crime."

There is no easy solution to the problem of addiction, and we must not pretend there is. Simply registering of addicts and allowing them to get their daily rations, as is done in England with its more than 500 known addicts, would hardly be practicable in North America — where New York City alone has more than 50,000 known addicts.

Most of them are not "bad" people; they are pathetically weak people. They desperately require help, for they are unable or unwilling to help themselves. By ignoring their plight, we throw them into the hands of the most vicious elements in society, the wholesale suppliers, who grow fat on the sickness we callously designate as a "crime."

DR. STUART ROSENBERG Says

Give Your Love — With Freedom

"Love thy neighbor as himself."

The commandment doesn't read quite that way; but unless you mean this too, the larger point is clearly lost. Love without freedom can result in neurotic tyrannies — if the one we claim to love is, in reality, tied firmly to our power and dominion.

Only if our love is given freely and may be freely received can those whom we say we love retain their uniqueness, and maintain their personal integrity.

Too often, we exploit love as a false, if acceptable, way of expressing our desire to control and dominate the lives of others.

The child who never marries because his mother's love is all he thinks he needs — has been duped, not loved. The husband who does his wife's bidding, not because he wants to, but because his feeling of love has been replaced by a false sense of duty — is no lover, but a dehumanized robotized slave.

Love — real love — seeks no coercion, no authority, no military power. It desires no sovereign superiority; rather, it finds reward in the self-fulfillment of the beloved.

Parents ought never to confuse love with suppression of the child's individuality, or the need for the younger one to be someone other than the older,

When we want to have it our way and refuse to appeal to reason and common sense, we often burst out in tears, dramatic scenes which sometimes end up with some such spiteful punch-line: "You don't love me!"

But why should anyone be expected to love you, if your love is only a synonym for uncritical, even uncivil, obedience. Better suggest that your "lover" bow down before you, and come closer to telling the real truth of your desire.

And even those who "love" the world — their neighbors, the strangers, according to crisp scriptural imperative — must learn to couple love with freedom. When do you love your neighbor — and how? When he thinks as you do, prays as you do, votes as you do, acts as you do?

If so, your love is not love — it is hate for differences, inverted as love for similarity. The real test of our protestations comes when we let him who must be himself, be himself — and love him for what he is. Not for what he isn't.

For love is a two-way street and the traffic has the right of way to move in the direction it is travelling. When we start playing the God — or the policeman — by changing the movement our way, we have stopped loving. We may be speaking softly, but our big stick is showing!

Nureyev, who defected from Russia, sat in a makeup chair, his long hair in curlers, awaiting his call to go on stage.

DURANTE? NYET!
Asked if he'd ever heard of Durante, the Russian said "nyet."

A pal of Durante's said "so what? Jimmy hadn't never heard of this bum before either."

Fortunately no one bothered to translate for the dancer. But the ever-thoughtful Durante spoke highly of his guest.

"This guy may talk better English than me," he grinned. "But can he dance better? Never! That I won't concede."

TV SPECIAL
The show, titled "Jimmy Durante meets the lively arts," will be beamed via ABC. But the special was being taped at CBS-TV.

Durante sat with the audience when Nureyev came on stage preparatory to his ballet trick. He spent a full 45 minutes loosening his muscles and warming up.

In a loud whisper Durante said, "How about that? He takes all that time to get ready to dance. Me? I start in cold."

"He's got awful long hair, too. That ain't a wig is it? I don't dare ask him. But the women are crazy about him. Look at 'em, they're ready to swoon. I can understand why. He's got a big nose—not as big as mine, but a big nose gets the girls every time."

Durante watched the dancer in awe. The audience broke into applause and Nureyev stopped, furious.

"No clapping!" he bellowed. "Absolutely quiet, I want."

The audience shrank back, horrified at its gaffe.

Rudy

"He's right," Durante said in a voice that carried to the stage. "Us artists should work in quiet."

GIs Shooting Women

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
SAIGON (AP) — American troops in Viet Nam face the ugly prospect of having to shoot women.

War in Viet Nam for decades has been a family affair, in which the delicate-looking women of the nation have fought beside their husbands.

Last Thursday, American paratroopers fought the bloodiest engagement an American unit has yet encountered in Viet Nam.

WOMEN FIGHTING

As troops from the 173rd Airborne Battalion stormed through one hamlet after another in D Zone, they met stiff resistance.

Some of it came from Viet Cong regulars in khaki uniforms, firing heavy machine-guns. Some of it came from women, seen frantically hurling grenades at the advancing Americans.

Ten Americans died in the fight, and 42 others were wounded. Some of the women were almost certainly killed in the paratrooper assault.

Many Vietnamese, including the Viet Cong, feel men fight better with their women beside them.

Some of these women have become locally famous. The almost legendary Kim Loan, in her late 30s, for three years has been regarded as the scourge of Long An province.

Kim Loan went on an assassination binge after her Viet Cong husband was killed a few years ago, and gained such a reputation the Viet Cong put her in charge of all terror and subversion operations in a huge sector only 15 miles south of Saigon.

Other Viet Cong women operatives have led propaganda and terror teams with impressive results.

Thousands of women have been arrested as Viet Cong agents. Many have been imprisoned and some have been shot. Last year, a U.S. intelligence officer committed suicide after learning his girl friend was a Viet Cong spy.

Son of Sir Henry Crease May Be Oldest Victorian

By JAMES K. NESBITT

Who is the oldest living native of Greater Victoria, now that Miss Evaline Pemberton has gone at the age of 98?

It could be Arthur Douglas Crease, Q.C., who was born in Victoria March 1, 1872, which makes him now 93.

He is the son of Sir Henry Paring Pellet Crease, first attorney-general of the Crown Colony of British Columbia in 1888, under Governor James Douglas. He was a Supreme Court Justice and when he retired was knighted by Queen Victoria.

The Crease home was Pentrelew on the curve of Fort Street hill. The old house is now a church. In its hey-day it was the scene of many stylish high-society events, a gathering place for the elite of Victoria. An invitation to Pentrelew was as much sought-after and prized as an invitation to Government House.

Mr. Crease was named Douglas after Sir James Douglas, who was his godfather. Mr. Crease was five when Sir James died in 1877, but he remembers his godfather quite well, for the old man frequently called at Pentrelew.

Miss Pemberton was the only daughter of Augustus F. Pemberton, first police court magistrate in Victoria, whose wife was Augusta Brew, sister of Charles Brew, who established British Columbia's first police force in the Cariboo gold rush days of 1858.

The Pemberton home was Glenview, on Fairfield Road hill, just east of Five Points corner. It was torn down long ago to make room for new homes.

Russian Plane Leaves Halifax

HALIFAX (CP) — A Russian TU-114 airliner, largest civilian craft to land at the Halifax International Airport, is scheduled to leave for Moscow Thursday with members of the Molotov-Danese Company.

The turbo-prop aircraft, which has two counter-rotating propellers on each of its four engines, arrived Tuesday eight hours and 43 minutes after taking off from Moscow.

The 170-member Molotov group, including 118 dancers, will give its final performance here tonight.

Police Recover Drowning Victim

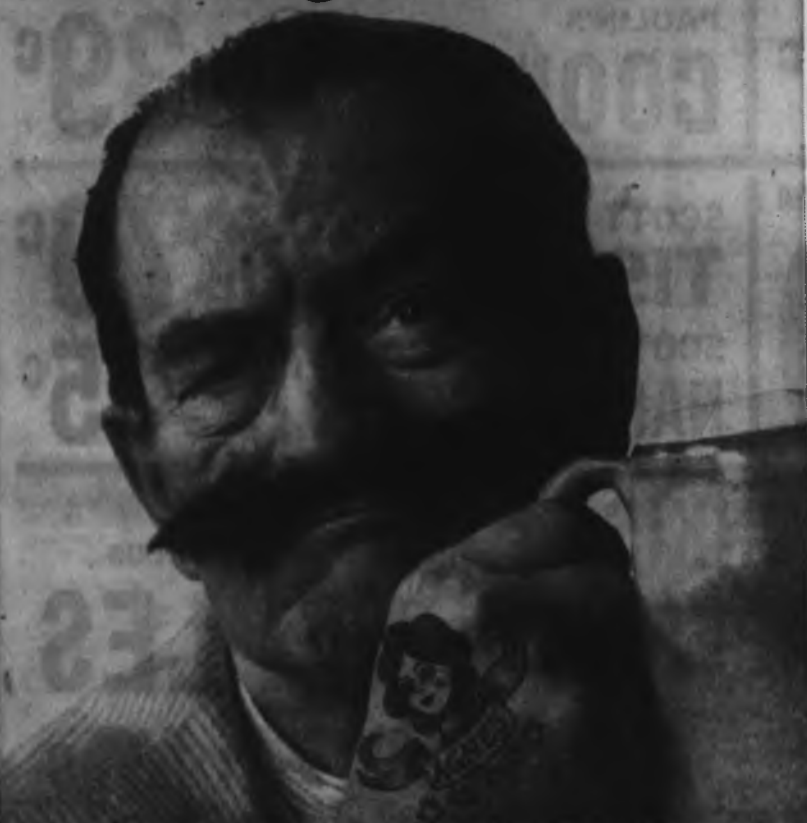

DELTA (CP) — The body of one of two missing fishermen was recovered Sunday by police in Delta. RCMP said they found the body of 45-year-old George Gussone of Port Coquitlam and they are still searching for William Sailor, 33, of Coquitlam. They disappeared on a June 17 fishing trip.

The cadets are from universities throughout Canada. During the training tour the cadets will be assigned regular seamen's duties.

Saltair May Lose Existing Fire Protection

NORTH COWICHAN—Saltair, which last weekend voted down a proposal to merge with North Cowichan, may be on its own for fire protection, Councillor John Cameron of North Cowichan said Wednesday.

Coun. Cameron said that while attending fires in the Saltair area firemen from Chemainus are not covered by compensation and "firemen do not feel justified in going into this area (Saltair) without protection. They have informed me they will no longer answer calls in that area."

NANAIMO—Two rival airline companies are bidding for the lease of Nanaimo airport.

At Monday's council meeting Nanaimo Airlines made a last-minute bid for the lease at the airport which expires this year. Previous lease holder has been Pacific Coastal Airlines, or as it was formerly known, Casadair. They paid the city one dollar per year for a 10-year lease, and in turn the city paid a similar amount to the federal government.

NANAIMO—There will be no inquest into Saturday's death of Floyd Andrew Briggs, Nanaimo Bay, Coroner Ross Hunter said he is satisfied Briggs died because of his own negligence. The victim crashed head-on into a loaded truck at 7:25 p.m., demolishing the left side of his new car.

TOFINO — Dwayne Parker, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Rueben Parker of Tofino, has left for Saskatoon where he will be guest of his grandparents.

TOFINO — Linda and Cheryl Basswood are spending summer holidays with their parents here. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Basswood. The girls have been attending St. Ann's Academy at Victoria for three years.

PORT ALBERNI — A new fire hall with paid staff and several other improvements, will probably result in changing the insurance standing here.

DUNCAN—First preparations have started for the "show window of Vancouver Island," the Cowichan Exhibition, which is the oldest agricultural fair on the island.

The first Cowichan exhibition was held in 1867.

This year's event will be staged Sept. 10 and 11, at the Cowichan Exhibition grounds. Organizers already have lined up a wide range of entertainment.

Special attractions will include a pet show, puppet shows, ladies' mail-driving contest, horse-shoe pitching, calf races, native

Indian dancers, Chinese dancing group, Sikh sword dance, square dancing, western riding competition, sheep dog trials, parade of stallions and a parade of cattle champions.

COMPLETE DISPLAY

Besides a full line of agricultural and horticultural exhibits the Cowichan fall fair is one of the few on Vancouver Island to boast a complete display of local craftsmen, artists and photographers. There will be over 2,000 classes.

Cowichan Exhibition Board secretary Mrs. Kay Mynkant said Wednesday that preparations for the fair require most of the year.

Hard at work with her are president Miss Mary Waldon and Peter Stone, vice-president; Henry Westcott, second vice-president; Harold Whitfield, third vice-president; Tom Groves, director; Archie Stevenson, livestock superintendent, and Jack Ross, grounds superintendent.

Searchers Strand Fisherman

TOFINO — Hamilton fisherman Larry Sport is out after a minkop that had pulled him in as a possible drowning victim.

On Tuesday Mr. Sport pulled his motorized dugout canoe ashore at Chemainus's Beach, near Tofino, and went to sleep in the forest.

The boat was spotted and thought to have been washed ashore after Mr. Sport fell overboard. It was taken to Tofino and police began a search for Mr. Sport.

In the meantime, the owner had awoken to find himself stranded.

He hiked six miles to the Tofino lifeboat station, then hitched a ride and collected his boat.

Motorcade To Stress Road Need

PORT ALBERNI—The Chamber of Commerce plans a woodland cavalcade to publicize the need for the Cumberland-Alberni road, discussed for 78 years and still unbuilt.

Port Alberni Mayor Les Hammer suggested the cavalcade, which would follow a crude road hacked through the hills.

A chamber committee will make plans for the motor trek in late August or early September.

Mayor Hammer and Alberni's Mayor Fred Bishop had discussed the road with Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell.

Group Aims to Block Saanich has changed its mind," said Mr. Gorst.

He said he hoped the Saanich application would be rejected if an appeal is held.

The application was approved by the Pollution Control Board prior to the current uproar that resulted in the formation of the waterways association.

Saanich officials have steadfastly refused to withdraw their application despite the pressure, although Reeve Hugh Curtis has said that there is a possibility that the Northridge plant could be fitted into a 3.5-mile sewer line that will serve the children's hospital.

UNDER REVIEW

The withdrawal announcement by Mr. Chant came after a number of meetings with Saanich officials, but Mr. Curtis has refused to make similar announcement, saying only that the matter is still under review.

Some feel that Saanich will await the outcome of the appeal in the hopes that it will go in favor of the treatment plant.

Members of the staff of the provincial secretary confirmed that there will probably be a hearing. If past practices are continued, however, it will be closed to the press.

Those who save registered appeals include Esquimalt municipality, the waterways association, Consolidated Building Corporation, the View Royal Ratepayers Association, and a few private citizens.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING STIMULATES BUYING

2 out of 3 new Ambassador buyers switched from other manufacturers this year.

(Ambassador sales up 211%)

For thousands of people who had always been loyal to the other makes, 1965 was the year of the big switch. They turned their backs on cars they'd always bought and moved to Ambassador. You can bet they must have had some pretty good reasons. We bet disillusionment was one of them. (When you've put up with rust, rattles and repair bills year after year, you start wondering if you really have to!)

But we think the new Ambassador itself was the most important reason. This year's Ambassador is the biggest, most luxurious ever built—more solid Rambler quality designed for the larger car buyer. And the Ambassador offers more options this year—everything from bucket seats to power disc brakes. Improved performance, too—including the new 232 cu. in. Torque Command Six, the most powerful, smoothest-riding six on the road, and a mighty 327 cu. in. V8. Of course, Ambassador's truly outstanding interior must have sold quite a few people (or was it the big car luxury at a medium price that did the selling?).

No matter what their reasons were, you can probably think of some of your own to go Ambassador. Who knows—maybe the famous Rambler features (Deep Dip Rustproofing, Double Safety Brakes, Ceramic-Armoured Muffler, rattle-free Single Unit Construction) are beginning to make a lot of sense to you. They've already made a lot of sense to thousands of people who were in the same boat.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Evans

To Live in Trail

Alberta Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Evans travelled from Regina, Sask., recently to hear marriage vows exchanged between Marjorie Rose Ann Elrose and their son, Terry Douglas Evans.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Grant Elrose, 1337 Arm Street, Victoria.

Floral arrangements in pink and white tones decorated St. Martin's-in-the-Field's Church for the ceremony at which Rev. B. C. J. Cowan officiated.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Jack Lindley sang "My World." Organist was Mrs. F. Acreman.

A floor-length gown of nylon chiffon over taffeta, styled with a cathedral train, was worn by the bride. The bodice of the gown featured lily point sleeves and a lace-edged bateau neckline. A headpiece of lilies and seed pearls held her three-tier veil and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and white carnations.

Matron of honor, Mrs. R. A. Birch, and bridesmaid Miss Mary Mitchell were matching gowns of aqua, complemented with tony floral headpieces and matching bouquets of white carnations.

Lynn Birch was flower girl for her aunt in a pink frock styled with a white lace overskirt. She wore a tony floral headpiece and carried a basket of pink roses and white carnations.

Best man was Fred Beacham and ushers were Melvin Elrose and Robert Holmes.

Byron Johnson, Milnes Landing, proposed the toast to the bride at the reception in Holy-wood House.

The couple are now making their home in Trail, following a honeymoon trip to Alberta.

For travelling, the new Mrs. Evans donned a yellow suit, accented with chiffon hat en tone and white accessories.

Floor-Length Gowns Back This Winter

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—The uniform for the fashionable keepers of the night watch come fall and winter will be the jewelled, floor-length evening dress.

Or, for a choice, all's well too for the woman who wishes to slip into a black wool or silk crepe also reaching the floor.

Both are the dominant fashions for the winter evenings, spent at home or doing the charity ball bit, and in each the silhouette remains basically a willowy one. Major exception—chiffon formal which call for yards of that billowy fabric.

Evening fabrics spell luxury, with a king's ransom in the cutting rooms and en route to stores of velvets, chenille textured laces, caviar beading (new term for jet beads), warp print silks, heavy satins and a glittering array of metallics. Add on yards of trim of ostrich and fur, both the flat broadtail and fluffy fox.

The opulence showed through-out collections of the New York couture group of designers who with auxiliary members in allied fashion fields are holding a week of shows for visiting fashion reporters.

Designers bat not an eyelash at quoting wholesale prices ranging up to $1,000 per garment, scare you off, any number of them! For dresses beaded and the handsomely jewelled number stoned from neck to hem, hers are within the more modest but some of the prices eat clothes budget.

Parents of the principals are PO and Mrs. Gordon J. McLean, 1235 Styles Street, and Mrs. Beckley, 137 Michigan Street, and the late Mr. R. Beckley.

For "something old" the bride wore a pearl sunburst given to her by her grandmother. Lace appliques enhanced the bride's floor-length gown en train of white peau de soie. Her crown and veil, belonging to her cousin, fulfilled the "something borrowed" tradition.

Mr. McLean gave his daughter in marriage.

Mrs. Leo Hazel as her sister's matron of honor and the Misses Sandra Martin and Sandra Evans, bridesmaids, were gowned alike in floor-length gowns of blue-shot taffeta. Miss Margy McLean, junior bridesmaid, and Miss Ginny-Lou Sundberg, flower girl, wore rose taffeta gowns.

Mr. Douglas Beckley was best man for his twin brother, Mr. B. Johnson. Mr. Leo Hazel, Mr. Danny McLean and Mr. Cecil Beckley were ushers.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Ernest Casals.

For a honeymoon trip to Calgary the bride chose a blue suit and picture hat en tone as her going-away ensemble.

Murdoch-Hiscock

Now making their home in Dawson Creek, B.C., are newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. David Murdoch who were married here in Cathedral United Church. The bride is the former Elva Hiscock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hiscock, 4135 Oakridge Crescent.

Mrs. L. Brown, bridesmaid, and Miss Linda Hiscock, bridesmaid, wore short length mauve gowns styled after the bride's.

Mr. Dennis Murdoch was best man. Ushering were Mr. Keith Hiscock, Mr. Lyle Shepherd and Mr. Doug Brown.

At the reception which followed in the Ingraham Hotel the bride's grandfather, Mr. W. E. Shepherd, sang "I'll Walk Beside"

PERSONAL MENTION

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

Back from a holiday that took her three months from Victoria is Mrs. Philip Barnett. From Winnipeg, where she stopped to see the Jack Kilgus and brought their daughter, Diana Kilgus, back to Victoria with her.

Mrs. Barnett attended St. Margaret's School here until her parents moved back to Winnipeg five years ago. With her cousin, Ted Barnett, she will be riding, swimming and playing badminton as well as seeing old friends.

Another former Victorian living in Edmonton, just 20 minutes out of Ontario is Mrs. Robert Strickland, the former Jean Fletcher. Her husband is in the Belgian Navy, too. The Stricklands have two sons, Paul and Robert.

Judy and Jean see quite a lot of one another as they were friends here before their marriages. Judy wanted to give her mother a list of girls she wanted to send messages to but Mrs. Barnett left without it.

The traveler was in England for about a week taking it easy with friends near Henley. She also stopped to visit in Toronto and Montreal on her way back.

Summer Visitors

Summer visitors continue to check in every day and among their numbers are many former Victorians.

Mrs. and Mr. John Fiske with their four sons, Jimmy, Carvin, Brent and David were here for a few days visiting Mrs. Fiske's mother, Mrs. Frederick Milroy.

At present the visitors from Kelowna are out on North Pender Island staying at the summer place of Mr. Fiske's father, Dr. J. C. Fiske. There is a whole 60 acres out there for the boys to play anything from Indians to cops and robbers.

Mrs. W. D. Leggatt (the former Marie Jones) with her three daughters, Doreen, Paul and Vicki are over from North Vancouver and are staying with Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Fiske at the Ruddyard Kipling. Mrs. Fiske is Mrs. Leggatt's mother.

They will also be staying with the girls' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Leggatt before going back to the mainland in about two weeks.

80th Birthday

There were seven of her grandchildren and three great-grandchildren at the party for Mrs. A. B. Chalmers when she celebrated her 80th birthday.

Deep Cove Chalet

This seems to be the era of restoration and renovation in and around Victoria. And there have been some wonderful improvements as everyone knows.

The historic old Deep Cove Chalet has certainly had a face-lifting inside and out and the grounds all gussied up.

Even if at first sight you are struck with a little nostalgia for the former, old, rambling place, this is soon dispelled.

And you do miss Selma Pratt, the former owner, who used to bring her tea into the beer parlor on the dot of 4 each afternoon.

The report of the actual constructional changes has already been told but you really have to pay a visit to realize just how many improvements have been made.

Kids Wheel And Deal

EDMONTON (CP)—Operation Wheeler Dealer, a country-wide Red Cross drive to buy wheelchairs, was a success here when five Junior Red Cross organizations raised more than $600. The aim is to provide wheelchairs to allow hospital patients to return home for visits. Otherwise, "those who cannot afford to rent wheelchairs are forced to stay in hospital," says Elaine Krause, Alberta supervisor.

PAID IN "LADIES"—Pay in the royalist army of Yemen is 15 "fat ladies" monthly—that is 15 Maria Theresa dollars.

Hats Tell a Tale

NEW YORK (AP)—You can almost tell what a woman has in her head by what she puts on it, the fall hat preview presented for fashion writers by the Millinery Institute indicated.

Apparently today's hat-wearing woman is thinking about youthfulness, the White House Tuxedo, the space race, James Bond, and romance, or else her designer is.

These were the messages the models got across as they bounced in and out of the dressing room wearing toppers by the top U.S. milliners.

With the new crocheted caps borrowed from the Mode in England, the helmets swiped from the astronauts, hoods and turbans, women do not show much hair.

Newlyweds to Live At Honeymoon Bay

A coronet of orange blossoms and seed pearls held in place on a hairloom veil belonging to the bride's mother when Karen Dale Elizabeth Sinclair became the bride of Brian Arthur Norman of Honeymoon Bay, B.C.

Given in marriage by her brother, Barry Sinclair, the bride wore a gown of silk nor-ganza in classic style, featuring a portrait neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. Lace appliques highlighted the skirt and bodice, and a bow accented the draped bustle at the back. She carried a cascade bouquet of sweetheart roses, and wore a gold bracelet, gift of the groom.

White gladioli and Esther Reed daisies decorated St. Mary's Anglican Church for the evening ceremony when Canon Hywel J. Jones heard vows uniting the daughter of Mrs. H. L. Sinclair, 2218 Kilaross Avenue, and the late Mr. Sinclair, and the son of A. E. Norman of Honeymoon Bay. Geoffrey Thornburn was organist, and Mrs. J. H. Flatman sang "O Perfect Love."

Matching bell-skirted gowns of turquoise silk were worn by maid of honor Miss Valerie Watkin and bridesmaid Mrs. John Smith, who carried crescent bouquets of pink carnations. Bridesmaid Mrs. Gordon Reitama, the bride's sister, chose a gown of rose peau de sole in similar styling, and carried a crescent bouquet of white carnations.

Little flower girl Caroline Bell, wearing a pink frock, carried a colonial bouquet of pink carnations. Michael Reitama, the bride's nephew, was ringbearer. Tom McEwan, Port Renfrew, B.C., was best man, and Larry Foulds, Cayuse, and Alan Norman the groom's brother, ushered guests to their pews.

At the reception following in St. Mary's Church hall, lovebirds holding two wedding rings topped the three-tier cake made by the bride's grandmother. Rosebuds and silver candelabra decorated the bridal table. Dr. W. J. Bell proposed the toast to the bride.

Leaving for a honeymoon in the Okanagan, the bride wore a two-piece Italian knit suit in pink, with white accessories, and an orchid corsage. The couple will make their home at Cayuse, Honeymoon Bay.

The goodies you put in meat loaf

...are now in a mix!

It makes meat loaf go a long-er way!

Plus a few special goodies of our own that make a mouth watering meat loaf (more servings per pound of meat, too!) The savings in time are obvious. You'll save a penny here, a penny there on ingredients (that mounts up when you serve meat loaf often). But, the big savings show up in the pan: it makes meat go a longer way. It does wonders for meat balls, hamburgers, etc. To take the place of your own meat loaf mix, this one would have to be something special. It is.

Also delicious for

Ann

Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was undecided as to whether I should write to you or run an ad in the classified section of this paper. You see, I have a slightly used boy friend I'd like to get rid of. He broke his leg skiing last November and I can't get him out of my apartment.

The young man is 32, unmarried, handsome in a rugged, Irish way, 6 feet tall, a superb dancer, doesn't drink or smoke (too much) and he is a writer by profession. This is part of the problem. He writes cheques on our joint account to which he has contributed nothing for over eight months.

When he broke his leg I made the horrible mistake of letting him move into the second bedroom. I wouldn't feel right about throwing him out in the street. An ideal solution would be to find him another home. I'm signing my name, and telephone number in the hope that someone will take this charming mess out of my hands—and I am not kidding.—Miss MURRYHILL

Dear : Sorry, I can't print your name and telephone number. First, it's against the rules of this column to put one reader in touch with another. Second, I'm afraid you'd be deluged with offers.

All some dames need to know is that a man is 6 feet tall, handsome and a superb dancer and they will try to grab him—secure in the knowledge that they can overlook his petty faults and turn him into an ideal husband overnight. So, Doll—no deal.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night a friend and I went to a TV studio to see a give-away show. Several people from the audience volunteered to compete for prizes. I was horrified when a woman who was about eight and a half months pregnant got up on the stage. She looked as if she was going to have twins for sure—maybe triplets.

The master of ceremonies said, "I hope you win something you can use in your condition." The woman won two pairs of roller skates. Everyone in the audience roared.

The M.C. kept repeating, "in your condition," as if he had to point out to the audience what her condition was. My friend thought this was very funny. I was appalled. Don't you think it was tasteless for the host of the show to exploit the woman this way? Although she was good natured about it I'll bet she felt awful. I'd like your opinion—HOUSE DIVIDED.

Dear House: The woman knew she was pregnant when she Delectable salad for warm weather eating.

Favorite Hot Dish Makes Light Salad

Here is a recipe which turns a favorite hot dish into a refreshing, light warm-weather salad. The familiar ingredients are macaroni and cheese. Chilled to shivering in a gelatin base, the result is delightful. For extra color and flavor there's a generous sprinkling of ready-to-use canned sweet peas.

You'll find this molded Mac 'n Cheese Salad ideal for a club luncheon. Enhance its built-in flavor with crisp cucumber fingers sporting a gay paprika trim.

Dissove gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water, shredded cheese, vinegar and salt. Stir until cheese has softened. Chill until partially set. Fold in drained canned peas and remaining ingredients. Place in oiled 1-quart mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on serving plate and garnish with salad greens and relishes, if desired. Yield: 8 servings.

Our Man In The Kitchen

—HYMAN GOLDBERG—

We think it's terrible, the way comedians keep telling those awful stories that are supposed to be jokes about wives and married life, don't you? Like the one about the two fellows who were the last ones in the bar when it was closing up for the night.

"What does your wife say when you come home this late?" asked one. "Who, me?" said the other. "I'm not married."

As they were being thrown out by the polite bartender, the first fellow said: "Well, if you're not married, why do you stay out so late?"

Isn't that terrible? What we think is wonderful is:

GLAZED BARBECUED HAM STEAKS
Four ham steaks, about 1-inch thick, 3 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup brown sugar, 1/3-can pineapple syrup, 4 pineapple rings.

Slash the fat around the ham steaks if you are going to put them on a grill over charcoal, to keep them from curling up. If you are going to grill them in a basket type of grill, which we prefer, because meats can be turned more easily, and flare-ups controlled more easily, it isn't necessary to slash the ham steaks. Whether you use either type of grill, get it hot before you put the meat in — or on — and rub it with a piece of fat so the meat won't stick to it.

The butter, sugar, and syrup should be brought to the boiling point and stirred until the sugar is completely melted, and then kept hot. Keep the meat — this is talking about — 3 inches from the "fired" and cook, brushing with the glaze, for a total of not more than 15 minutes, turning it from side to side 3 times. Put the pineapple rings on or in the grill for 2 minutes, turning once, and put one slice on each ham steak, pour over it any of the glaze that's left and serve.

Of course, this can be done in the broiler at home in exactly the same way. But it's nice, we think, to barbecue over charcoal foods other than hamburgers, frankfurters, and steaks, don't you?

And while we're at it, let us say again that while steaks, hamburgers, fowl, or whatever, are great grilled over charcoal, why not, occasionally make a stew on the grill, just as you would on your kitchen stove.

If you're having company for your backyard barbecue, you can start the stew some time before they arrive, and all you have to do after they arrive is add vegetables to the pot from time to time, depending on how long each vegetable should be cooked before serving. You'll have more time to spend with your guests, they will admire the careful carelessness with which you add the ingredients to the pot, and they will probably be surprised and pleased to get something other than the ubiquitous frankfurter, hamburger, or steak. And all you need is a Dutch oven or any kind of large heavy pot, though, of course, a cast-iron pot is best. A big cast-iron pot is a good buy, if you have a fireplace in your house, for there is nothing so pleasing — in the winter, or fall, of course — to the appetite, as the sight and smell of a dinner stewing away right out in open view.

U.S. Moves Closer To Massive Call On Reservists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prospect of an expanded U.S. draft and reservist call-up sharpened Wednesday and Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara warned of untapped Communist strength in Viet Nam.

It also was learned the army, navy, air force and marines have submitted, for planning purposes, tentative estimates for reserve and national guard call-ups totalling more than 200,000 men.

DEVELOPMENTS
Whether a decision will be made to call this number, fewer or more, will depend on developments.

McNamara was answering questions at a press conference preceding his departure Wednesday night with Henry Cabot Lodge and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, for an assessment of the Viet Nam War.

McNamara said: "What the decisions will be based upon this review, I can't say."

ENEMY INCREASES
"But I do draw your attention to the fact the Viet Cong are continuing to increase their forces in South Viet Nam; that we have reported to you on previous occasions they currently have in that country forces not yet assigned to combat; that the level of operation and the intensity of operation during the summer has increased as we predicted it would; that we can expect further increases in the Viet Cong operations....

U.S. CALL UP
"It is, I think, reasonable to assume that if the U.S. forces assigned to South Viet Nam or to Southeast Asia increase in strength, it will be necessary to consider calling up reserve and guard forces, extending the hours of duty of personnel presently in the forces and increasing the draft calls."

Meanwhile, some senators began a drive to increase the $45,000,000,000 outlay in the military appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1966, which began two weeks ago.

URGENT DELAY
However, McNamara was quoted as urging delay until he and his colleagues complete their mission to Viet Nam a week hence and make their estimates.

Informal sources said the army has asked for 120,000 guardsmen and reservists, including six independent brigades, the navy 40,000 individual reservists.

The marine corps was said to have proposed a call-up of the 4th marine division and its air wing, which totals about 44,000 men. The air force was reported to have asked for call-up national guard and reserve air transport units totalling perhaps 20,000 men.

Guerrillas Ambush Viet and U.S. Force

SAIGON, Thursday (UPI) — An estimated 250 Viet Cong guerrillas today ambushed a government force and its American advisors on a road-clearing operation 33 miles north of Saigon.

A U.S. military spokesman said the fate of the government soldiers and their American advisors was not immediately known. The pre-dawn attack occurred near the deserted railway station at Bau Bang, 10 miles west of Phuoc Vinh, where American paratroopers last week saved the town from falling into Communist hands.

U.S. fighter-bombers yesterday flew deeper than ever before into Communist North Viet Nam to bomb targets only 32 miles from the Communist Chinese border. Other American and Vietnamese planes flew nearly 300 sorties north and south of the 17th parallel dividing Viet Nam.

MORTAR SHELLS
The display of air power came as 2,976 U.S. army combat infantrymen landed in South Viet Nam to bring American military strength there to more than 71,000 men.

Two U.S. marines were killed and nine others wounded when a mortar shell landed short of its target during an operation 12 miles west of the Da Nang air base.

Pentagon Checks Husband Not Lost

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The wife of a 31-year-old paratrooper fighting in Viet Nam has learned from Washington that her husband is not missing in action.

Jane Sides, 29, said she had believed her husband, Sgt. Richard Sides, was missing because she had heard that his brigade was missing. But the Pentagon said Wednesday a check of military services shows "Nobody by the name of Richard Sides is missing."

Sides' father, E. E. Sides, also said he had received a letter from his son and reported he was "feeling fine and in good spirits."

Her earlier belief that her husband was missing was disclosed when she told police Tuesday that she had received telephone threats because her husband is fighting in Viet Nam.

Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation checked the report but later dropped their investigation. The FBI said it was unable to determine the threats were made. Police also withdrew from the case.

Deadly Bomber Goofs

QUESNEL (CP)—Alex Davidson is one of the deadliest marksmen in the water bombing business.

Three times he guided his Canoe water bomber over a blaze at the northeast arm of Quesnel Lake, and three times he scored direct hits on the fire with his red-dyed water.

Soon the fire was nothing more than a smoking heap of half-charred debris.

"Mission accomplished," he reported to his base.

IRATE OWNER

On landing in another part of the lake, he was met by an irate lodge owner who said the water bomber had just doused hours of hard work. The lodge owner had a burning permit and had spent several hours building the fire in an effort to get rid of unsightly scrub timber.

"It was rather a comedy of errors," a B.C. Forest Service spokesman said.

He said a spotter aircraft from Kamloops reported the fire. The call went to Prince George and Mr. Davidson loaded up his bomber and took off.

PERMIT FIRE

"Then we discovered it was a permit fire," said the official. "His radio didn't work. All the lookouts tried to warn him. But no use."

"Alex is a good pilot. He got the job done."

He added—a trifle wistfully—that the water drops were "very accurate."

"Very good drops indeed."

'Zorba' Film of Lusty Life

By PATRICK O'NEILL

It is said when author Nikos Kazantzakis died in 1957, strong men wept throughout Greece. For his work was dedicated to life, to the breath and being of man: Man as he drinks, lives, laughs, dances and thinks.

In Kazantzakis' work, that man would be a modern Ulysses, a Toda Rabs, or the most earthy of all his characters, Zorba.

The film Zorba the Greek, which opened last night at the Fox Theatre, shows Anthony Quinn at the peak of his acting career, in the portrayal of Zorba.

It is difficult to imagine any one but Quinn doing justice to Zorba: who danced when his son died, to ease the pain; who could work for money, but played and sang only for himself; who believed love was the key to Paradise.

Lila Kedrova presents a funny and sad picture of the woman who was washed in champagne by four admirals, many, many years ago.

But Kazantzakis wrote about more than the flesh; he saw Zorba the Greek as a dialogue between the man of the spirit (the 'boss'), and Zorba, the man of life.

He fashioned a conflict between the man who worships wine, music, and the soul, and the man who writes about Budtha, thinks about mystic Christianity, and questions the soul.

The film producers rejected this concept, and substituted for the intellectual man of spirit, an effeminate, insipid, snobbish, flapping Englishman... who carries an umbrella.

Alan Bates plays the part to perfection.

This tends to make the film one-sided. But the characterization of Zorba is as deep and rich as the picture of the boss is shallow.

The music, photography and editing are all done with care and imagination.

The film stays remarkably close to the plot-line of the book; the changes only heighten the impact of the story.

There was one puzzling change. In Kazantzakis' novel, life.

Zorba talks continually about his trips and adventures in Russia.

The film writer changed this to a mention of a trip to the United States.

This renders the film not only good, but socially acceptable.

Children Set Woods Fires

The latest children's game seems to be strike-a-match-and-see, and Langford fire ranger John Jones is angry.

Mr. Jones has appealed to parents to warn their children of the dangers of striking matches in the tinder-dry forests.

There were seven fires in the area last week and a total of 21 since the fire season started in May, most of them caused by children.

Volcanic Waste Moon Training

REYKJAVIK (AP)—A 25-man U.S. space team arrived in the volcanic wastelands of central Iceland Monday night as part of the training program for a trip to the moon. The U.S. space agency selected the area around Askja volcano, because the desolate landscape comes as close to resembling the lunar surface as any place on earth. The American team includes 11 astronauts.

Deep Cove Has Best Coho Run

King Fisherman

Big news for fishermen is that the best run of coho in years has hit Deep Cove waters. Reports indicate that just about anybody who goes fishing is bringing back at least some coho and that they are much bigger than usual for this time of year. Quite a few of the fish are tagged fish and all tags should be returned to the fisheries department to help in the survey to map the pattern of fish movements from Saanich Inlet and other nursery grounds.

Buffalo Steak On Menu

LUBAKA, Zambia (Reuters)—Elephant sausage, buffalo steak and grilled hippo steak will appear on Zambian menus soon if an ambitious government project succeeds.

But the reason for the plan is not primarily to satisfy the curious palate of the adventurous gourmet.

The usual story in Africa today is of big game stocks retreating before the ravages of man.

But in the Luangwa Valley, one of Zambia's main game reserves, there is over-crowding. Buffalo, elephants and hippos all must be thinned out.

The game department has decided that it might as well make use of the animals killed.

Governor General Vanier Continuing 'For Time Being'

OTTAWA (CP) — Governor General Vanier has decided "to continue in office for the time being," Prime Minister Pearson told a press conference today.

Mr. Pearson said a letter from Buckingham Palace has approved a continuation in office for the Governor-General, whose official five-year term expired last September, for an indefinite period.

DEEP SATISFACTION
The prime minister expressed deep satisfaction that Gen. Vanier, who celebrated his 77th birthday last April 23, had decided to stay on.

He could not say just how long Gen. Vanier would continue to hold the office of Queen's representative in Canada.

"He wanted to keep it open. He'll stay as long as he desires."

Gen. and Madame Vanier had "performed magnificently," Mr. Pearson said. "We are very fortunate to have had them."

Gen. Vanier had already accepted an extension of his term of office from last September until this fall, Mr. Pearson said, before the telegram was received today from Buckingham Palace announcing that the Queen had approved his continuation in office for an unspecified period.

The governor-general has just completed a strenuous three-week tour of Western Canada, but sides say his health is "very good."

He and Mme. Vanier are scheduled to leave Ottawa for their summer residence at Tadoussac, Que. later this month.

Gen. Vanier was appointed Governor-General on Aug. 1, 1959. Before that he had served his country as a distinguished soldier and diplomat.

Exchange Students To Arrive

The visit, early this summer, of 12 Vancouver Island high school students to Quebec will be reciprocated on Monday when a dozen French-Canadian youngsters arrive in Victoria.

The visit to Quebec was arranged by the local branch of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, and students were chosen from Victoria and the lower Island area.

During the two-week visit of the Quebec students they will be entertained and billeted by families of the youngsters who made the trip to Quebec.

Juvenile Delinquency

Big Brother Idea Urged

Rehabilitation of juveniles will be the main topic at a community welfare council meeting on children and youth, to be held in the board room of Spencerhouse, 1951 Cook, tonight at 8 p.m.

Greater Victoria juvenile detention home superintendent Charles Etchells will suggest to the committee a Big Brother system be implemented into the rehabilitation program for juvenile delinquents.

"Big Brother programs are not new," Mr. Etchells said. "They have one in Vancouver and most of the large cities in California and Oregon have them in operation."

The system operates by having a responsible member of the community volunteer to guide a juvenile's return to normal society after the youngster has been released from an institution.

According to Mr. Etchells, another aspect of the Big Brother program is for an adult to make friends with a boy who is the product of perhaps a broken home, to share fishing trips and other sporting events with the youngster who would not normally have these pleasures.

"Everybody does a lot of talking about the delinquency problem, but so far very few have taken any action," Mr. Etchells said.

Another of his suggestions is for the creation of a halfway house to help in returning the young offenders to community life.

The halfway house he suggests could house a diagnostic centre where psychological and other tests could be administered to the youngsters before sentencing and again on their release.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

In the sweat box that was our office last night hockey was more a welcome thought than an odd subject. And, after all, it is only about 10 weeks before the second edition of the Victoria Maple Leafs start getting out the kinks in Memorial Arena.

Manager Buck Houle, who gives the impression that being away from his beloved Toronto is getting easier to bear day after day, particularly after an 85 at Royal Colwood, talked about it yesterday. He made it sound so good, although much of it had to be speculative at this date, that summer's passing may be taken in stride.

Interesting things have been happening in the hockey world since the end of last season, and they take in Victoria, which could possibly come up with a club which would put to shame the strange collection of athletes which Houle and Rudy Pilous somehow conned into the Western Hockey League final last spring.

Ted Reynolds, happy to get away from football for a change, talked about it in Courtenay last Saturday and came up with a thoroughly acceptable if still-unsubstantiated statement.

"You fellows," he said, "are really going to be stacked this year. You could run away with the marbles."

Ted's reasoning for the thought was that he believed Stafford Smythe, president of the Toronto Maple Leafs, has a rather puckish sense of humor.

"There they are—Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle, with their big arenas and their major league hopes, and there you are in Victoria with a 5,000-seater," he explained. "I think Smythe would really get a bang out of it if little, old Victoria made them look sick."

Stranger things have happened for stranger reasons but Houle didn't accept the reasoning, although he'll feel awfully jilted if there isn't a vast improvement in Victoria personnel next season. It is obvious he believes that Victoria isn't going to be the forgotten west end of the Toronto hockey operation.

Houle lined up his dream team. It included the top nine players from last season and five standout newcomers. He expects to have goalkeeper Al Millar, defencemen Fred and Sandy Hucul and Claude Labrosse and forwards Larry Keenan, John Seaver, Milan Marcetta, Lou Jankowski and Gordie Redahl back and lists as the possible five newcomers Andy Heberton, Eddie Litzenberger, Aut Erickson, Orland Kurtenbach and Bob Barlow.

That would, indeed, be a stacked team and the thought of it made lunch a bright period between work and a try to better that 85 even though there were a few "ifs" before anything like this could become reality.

Heberton, who would add considerable to Victoria attendance, to say nothing of team efficacy, is not yet assured for Victoria. He is going to the Toronto camp and will get a fair chance to return to the NHL.

"If he can make it, and I have to hope he can and have to say that it is quite possible, that's where he should be," Houle said. "If he doesn't, he'll play in Victoria."

Kurtenbach, a big, rugged centreman who was outstanding in the WHL before joining Boston Bruins, could also be lost as far as Houle's hopes are concerned by proving that he can help the parent club. And the up-coming tug-of-war between Houle, Joe Cruzler of Rochester and Ray Miron of Tulsa for the best of the talent Toronto will send to its farm clubs might find our Victoria man the loser.

Houle, however, feels confident that he will come off much better than he did last year.

"Now that we have an interlocking schedule with the American League there'll be an effort to balance the two leagues as nearly as possible and we're going to belong."

But Houle could not, or would not, shed any further light on who is likely to replace Pilous as the Victoria coach.

It still could be Al Stanley, or it could be Fred Hucul, who badly wants to start a coaching career but may have to wait because the Leafs feel he can be an extremely valuable player for a few more seasons and Houle prefers a non-playing coach. And it could be someone whose name has not yet shown in the speculation, including even that of Allan "Buck" Houle.

"Punch will make up his mind about a coach next month, we'll open our training camp on September 25 and we'll have a better club in an even more interesting league," Houle beamed. The thought combined with the thought that anyone who came so close Tuesday could eagle the fifth on Wednesday had his cup overflowing.

BOLLIE WILCOX, the often peppery little rookie of last season, is destined for Tulsa but Al Millar, Houle says, will be back in Victoria although the Toronto farm system lost goalkeeper Gerry Cheevers and Don Simmons in the draft. Eddie Shack is likely to wind up with Rochester next season, one big reason being that the Americans may play as many as 10 of their home games in Maple Leaf Gardens because of the American Bowling Congress Tournament being held in Rochester. . . and can expect Vancouver Canucks to be a bigger threat this season now that Bert Olmstead is the new coach. The guess is that Olmstead is being groomed to eventually move up to the New York Rangers, and that means he will first have to get himself some sort of a record of success. . . That waiting you can hear on a quiet night comes from Portland, where Hal Laycoe and Harry Gilleman are still unable to console themselves over the loss of Andy Heberton. . . and with Pat Stapleton, who may wind up with St. Louis in the Central League if he doesn't make it with Chicago Black Hawks, also gone, the Buckaroos may be in for trouble next season.

Pitcher Geoff Hett

The Best in Town

By GUY STANLEY

Meet Geoff Hett. He pitches. He's been pitching a softball for 13 years and right now he does it better than anyone else in town.

Hett, 25, started pitching in Grade 7 in Castlegar and kept right on pitching when he moved to Victoria with his parents at the age of 16, hurling for Belmont High School.

While taking a degree in education at Victoria University, he played senior division softball for Gorge Hotel and later for McLaren Construction, Victoria's only Senior "A" softball team last year.

This year, the talented left-hander pitches for Century Inn, current leaders by a game and a half of the Victoria senior men's softball league, and who will represent Victoria in the provincial Senior

"A" tournament in Vancouver Aug. 7 and 8. Hett himself leads the league's pitching with 11 wins in 13 starts.

It was playing for Gorge that Hett feels he really learned his pitching trade. Coached by Eddie Foychuk, he was also taken under the wing of teammate Joe Cosier, one-time star of the Seattle Federal Old-Lines.

"When I first got to Senior "B" softball, I only had a fast ball. Then the rules changed forcing us back three feet further from the plate. It was Cosier who helped me develop a good variety of pitches to make up for the slower fast ball."

Hett, who now pitches a rise and a drop ball, a change-up and a curve in addition to his old fast ball favors the rise or the drop.

pattern and keep the batter off balance."

But Hett credits his catcher Doug Wilson with most of his success.

"A pitcher just throws what the catcher tells him to," he said. Besides, he has to generate the pitcher's confidence, and Doug has the fastest glove hand in the city, he's terrific."

Hett, who stands six feet and weighs 180 pounds, and has a wife, Lorraine, and a two-year-old daughter Shawna, teaches at Happy Valley Elementary School where he coaches both a girls' and a boys' softball team.

"The girls won all their games last year, and finished second this season," he says with pride. "The boys are doing well too."

They ought to, if Hett's coaching is anything like his pitching.

Shamrocks' Trouble Multiplies With Each Loss to Adanacs

By JIM TAYLOR

There are nine games left to play, but as of today it looks like a short, short lacrosse season for Victoria Shamrocks.

Coquitlam Adanacs trounced them 11-5 at Memorial Arena last night, winning the big one to go four points ahead of the Rocks in their personal feud for third place and a playoff spot in the Inter-City Lacrosse League.

And the way they did it brought one fact home to 1,600 fans. The Adanacs have more good lacrosse players than the Shamrocks, and they don't look as if they can be stopped.

Certainly the Shamrock team that played last night won't stop them. Not when it was out-hustled, out-hit and out-thought.

From the five-second mark, when Nirmal Dillon took a crushing check into the boards from Dick Crompton, the Rocks were a beaten club.

Dillon was carried from the floor on a stretcher, but returned in the second quarter. For the rest of the night the Rocks took turns chasing Crompton, but never really caught him and only looked silly in the process.

At one point, the Rocks had the odd-man play for seven consecutive minutes. For five of them they rarely even saw the ball as Gordie Gimple's well-coached young club ran circles around them.

Couch Jim McNeill points out that three of the Rocks' remaining games are against the Adanacs. The first of those comes Saturday night in Coquitlam.

Win those, and the Rocks would have a chance. But the way they played last night, they won't.

They managed only 26 shots against a red-hot Merv Schweitzer.

Warren Spahn Gone

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets asked waivers on veteran pitcher-coach Warren Spahn Wednesday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Manager Casey Stengel said he made the move "because we want younger men to get an opportunity on our roster in our youth development program."

Spahn, 44, came to the Mets from Milwaukee Nov. 25, 1964. He appeared in 29 games this season, winning four and losing 15. He had lost his last eight decisions.

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Australia's Ron Clarke shattered the 28-minute barrier for the 10,000 metre run and eclipsed two world records last night with a fantastic time of 27:39.4 over the Bislet Stadium track.

The tall, lean Aussie was clocked en route at 28:47.0 for six miles, surpassing the pending world record for that distance.

Clarke's time for the 10,000 metres—about 6 1/2 miles—was 34.6 seconds faster than the pending world mark of 28:14.0 set at Turku, Finland, last June 16.

The 28-year-old Aussie's time for the six miles smashed the pending mark of 27:11.6 racked up by two Americans, Bill Milks and Gerry Lindgren in their virtual dead heat in the U.S. AAU championship at San Diego, Calif., last month.

Clarke's sensational times overshadowed everything else in the first day of the two-day international meet.

Bill Crothers of Canada scored his second straight victory over Olympic champion Peter Snell of New Zealand in the 800-metre run. Crothers, who was second to Snell in the Tokyo 800 last year, was timed in 1:47.1 to Snell's 1:47.8. Britain's John Boulter, the pace-setter for the first 400 in 53.8, was third in 1:48.7.

Clarke is the listed world record holder for six miles—25:15.8 and 10,000 metres—28:15.6, which he set in one race at his home town of Melbourne on Dec. 18, 1963.

Clarke's two competitors, Jim Hogan of Ireland and Claus Boersen of Denmark, were no match for the powerful Aussie. Hogan was lapped once and Boersen twice in the course of the race. Still Hogan was clocked in the good time of 29:19.6 and Boersen in 31:03.2.

First Look at Golf Course Produces 66 for Campbell

TORONTO (CP) — Joe Campbell of Perledo Bay, under-par 66 and took the Fla., who hadn't seen the course until he stood on the first tee, spanked the par 70 Mississauga Club layout Wednesday for a four-stroke behind with 67.

Soccer Clinic Next Month

Trevor Churchill is coming back to Victoria Aug. 2 to 6 to conduct a soccer clinic for players and officials. It will be the third straight year the 40-year-old staff coach with the English Football Association has held the clinic, sponsored by the B.C. Football Association.

Classes will be held at Mount View High School. First sessions start at 10, run two hours, and are for juvenile players. Evening sessions at 7 deal mainly with instructions toward obtaining an Intermediate Coaching Award.

Those interested in attending the clinic are asked to contact Don Wakelyn by mail (3127 Cedar Hill Road), or telephone (384-5217) between 5 and 6 p.m.

34 Daily Colonist Victoria, B.C., Thurs., July 15, 1965

It wasn't me, I swear, who chalked "Yanks Go Home" on that brick wall at Royal Birkdale, Lancashire. But I'd be telling a lie if I pretended to be anything but delighted at the total eclipse of the American stars at the 1965 British Open.

The title, of course, went overseas again as assuredly as I predicted it would. It was Australian Peter Thomson's fifth Open triumph and without doubt his finest of the lot. What made it so great, what indeed made the Open itself the finest of the past 10 years, was the fact that from first shot to last it was a test of golfing artistry instead of brute force.

Birkdale remained a big hitter's course. Yet such were the prevailing conditions that subtlety and touch were still more vital factors. Thomson had them to perfection, so had several British players. The Yanks were all at sea. I have read a dozen inquiries. But, to me, the demise of the big Americans came solely because they could not play the second-shot target-golf that is the basis of their game at home.

The staggering sub-par scores they achieve in the States can only be attained from confident, accurate hitting into the heart of the greens from way down the fairways. In other words, the greens must be soft and holding.

Greens Slick as Ice-Caps

But at Birkdale at least a dozen of the greens were as fast as an ice-cap. Pitch on direct and all the backspin in the world could not guarantee your ball from streaking through the back.

What was required was the old-world technique of pitch-and-run, an infinitely more delicate business than the serial-bombardment methods of Nicklaus, Palmer and Co. Thomson mastered it. So did Brian Huggett and Christy O'Connor, the two men who kept Britain's hopes burning brightly till the last. But the Americans were so far behind that, to be honest, it revealed astonishing weaknesses in their game.

In fact, I would go as far as to say that if exactly the same conditions prevailed at Birkdale in October then Britain could comfortably win the Ryder Cup. The trouble is that by then the conditions will be different. Which is why it's unwise to crow too much about the downfall of the millionaire Americans.

The winds blow softly, the greens are holding where golf's big money is at stake. So I'm afraid that Britain's resurgence was only temporary.

Yet it was great while it lasted. Particularly for me, for at a fortnight short of my 49th birthday I must say I shared the views of the bookmakers and didn't bother to give myself a price.

To come 10th then, higher than Nicklaus and Palmer, was really beyond an old man's dreams. Yet it happened and here I am, in retrospect, actually analysing where I lost the championship!

In fact, what slim chances I had disappeared in the first four holes of both rounds on the final day. Each time I dropped two shots on that testing part of the course.

Grounds for High Dudgeon

But the man for whom I really felt sorry was my colleague on those last two rounds, Peter Allan.

When he came to the sixth and took a 10—five shots wasted hacking out of a bush after he had struck two screaming woods into the wind to finish pin-high—I would have understood it had he hurled his wedge out of sight and stamped off in what the Victorian novelists called high dudgeon.

Instead, that was his finest hour. He never once lost his composure and spent the rest of that round urging me on by saying: "Keep at it. You can win this thing yet."

Of course, I couldn't. But at least I had the satisfaction of justifying my novel sartorial outfit—lilac plus-fours, pale blue socks, powder blue sweater and black and white shoes—with a 35-foot putt across the final green in front of 10,000 people.

At my stage in life that's fun. But I swear that, Thomson apart the 1965 Open was enjoyed by very few of the big-name entrants.

This was golf as it was played by the Old Masters back in the 20s. And it just proved that brawn and modern equipment still can't master the more subtle of the world's courses.

In fact, there were two winners at the Open of 1965. Peter Thomson, Australia, and that magnificent Birkdale course itself. For at last the modern masters were reduced to something like lifeline.

Gene Gray singled in the winning run to give Model Sheet Metal a 4-3 edge over Jokers in the final game of Pony League Clarkville, Tenn., finished a stroke behind with 67. The elite among the field were left trailing by one, two and even more strokes. Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, Masters winner, was in a group at 69 along with defending champion Kel Nagle of Australia but they had to watch half a dozen with 68 move in ahead of them.

At Johnston of Montreal making a fine recovery from an attack of hepatitis that has kept him off the golf tour most of this year, was in the two-under-par bracket at 68. So was Bruce Devlin of Australia.

FINISH AT PAR Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., stormed down the back nine in three-under-par 33 to finish with even par 70 among nearly a score of others.

Gary Player of South Africa, winner of the U.S. Open, had trouble keeping his game together and finished with 74. It was a day for the victory-starved tourists. Campbell hasn't won a tournament since 1962 and Rudolph's last win was last year.

Campbell, 29, said he liked the course—a tight course, "not a test of strength" and was happy that he "is playing as well now as I have ever played."

This is Campbell's fourth appearance in the Canadian Open. His best in earlier tournaments was a tie for 15th in 1963.

MISSED PAR ONCE Campbell missed par only once, overhauling the third green.

Rudolph putted well, sinking one birdie putt after getting out of a trap. His approach at the par four 18th overshot the green and he took a five. He blamed himself for missing a tie with Campbell by using a putter from the edge of the apron instead of chipping.

Nicklaus said he was satisfied he is playing better and feels much encouraged. His one bad hole was the par-4 fourth where his approach was short. He chipped on and three-putted for a six.

Nagle played steadily with a birdie and eight pars on the front nine. Coming in he had one birdie and missed par once.

SEVERE START Palmer took a shaky three-over-par 38 from nine but came home strong with 33. He changed drivers for this tournament and said he drove extremely well. He felt his putting in "showing signs of getting better." He missed the last two holes with 30 and 30-foot putts. "The best putting I've done in six months."

Al Johnston's 68 was the highlight of a good showing by Canadian pros. George Knudson of Toronto, a regular on the tour, finished late with par 70, in the same big bracket with Adrian Bigras of Montreal, Quebec Open winner, and Bob Ross of Toronto.

Three alternates from Monday's qualifying round got into the championship play—Frank Whitley of Kitchener, Ont., Ken Folkes of Concord, N.C., and Billy Booe of Easton, Pa.

Bill Casper of Bonita, Calif., winner of the Western open, shot 33-36 for a first-round 69. Adrian Bigras, young Montreal pro, joined the par-70 bracket.

Veteran Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., was doing all right until he faded his drive into a hazard at the par-four ninth. He didn't leave the line of hazard with his next. Under a ruling, he played two club lengths out of the hazard, taking a stroke penalty, and needed six to get down.

The ninth was the only green Snead missed.

Canada Must Speak Out

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday Canada must always reserve the right to make public statements on U.S. foreign policies.

He told reporters it is necessary to balance the desirability of "quiet diplomacy" with the occasional necessity of public pronouncements.

Mr. Pearson was commenting on a statement in a special report on Canada-United States relations that Canada should refrain from publicly criticizing U.S. foreign policies in which this country has no direct interest.

He said he understands this statement was drafted by Arnold Heeney, former Canadian ambassador to Washington, and Livingston Merchant, former U.S. ambassador to Ottawa, before he made his April Philadelphia speech calling on the U.S. for a pause in air strikes against Communist North Viet Nam.

Mr. Pearson said he has always believed in quiet diplomacy and in trying to iron out difficulties with friends through confidential discussion and negotiation.

He didn't disagree in principle with the statement in the report.

However, Canada couldn't renounce its right to independent judgment and pronouncement.

"There are times when you have to get up and say things," the prime minister declared.

At the same time, there should always be consultation.

Mr. Pearson talked with reporters after a 2½-hour cabinet meeting.

Controversy Indicated Says U.K. Columnist

LONDON (CP)—A Guardian columnist suggests that the joint recommendations under which Canada would avoid publicly criticizing many phases of United States foreign policy "is likely to lead to a major political controversy in Canada."

"At any rate, it should," writes Leonard Beaton, former Montreal newspaperman, in describing proposals made by Arnold Heeney, former Canadian ambassador to the U.S. and Livingston Merchant, a retired U.S. diplomat and one-time ambassador to Canada. Their recommendations included a suggestion that Canada should avoid publicly criticizing American foreign policy "in the absence of special Canadian interest or obligations."

Beaton, 36, a journalist and director of studies for the Institute of Strategic Studies, a private organization studying peace and disarmament, was educated at McGill University and worked at the Montreal Gazette before coming to Britain some years ago.

Beaton wrote in Wednesday's issue about the proposed agreement: "The implication is that the Americans will have friends, policies, attitudes and commitments around the world which will be fashioned according to the interests and prejudices of Washington; and that Canada's, quite simply will not."

"A nation which is by most criteria the eighth or ninth most important in the world... and which has taken a large part in Europe's affairs in this century would in effect concede that its thought and relations were derivative."

He notes particularly the "striking" difference now between Canadian and U.S. foreign policy in relation to the Caribbean and Latin America and adds: "Major differences could quickly re-emerge."

Beaton adds, however, that "it is worth recalling that in broad outline it is merely a formal statement of the position which British and Australian governments already adopt."

Neither Mr. Wilson nor Sir Robert Menzies would have made the speech which Mr. Pearson made (recommending a pause in bombing of North Viet Nam); and no British or Australian prime minister has gone anywhere near as far as Mr. Diefenbaker went in opposing American policy.

BOTH ANXIOUS

"But that, fundamentally, is because both Britain and Australia are anxious to engage the Americans in defence of their own interests. That has not been so true of the Canadian government up to the present."

"Its bargaining position has been much stronger. Where secular interests have not had this effect, Mr. Pearson's own sense of the future of the country may yet bring about some form of North American union; or alternatively it might prove politically ruinous."

Hamilton Slams Report

OTTAWA (CP)—The Heeney-Merchant report on Canadian-American relations was labelled Wednesday as a diplomatic sell-out of Canadian sovereignty and resources.

Alvin Hamilton, former Conservative resources and agriculture minister, said that the report not only asks that Canada become the lapdog of the United States in world affairs but that this country agree to place-meal bargaining away of resources.

ASHAMED

Mr. Hamilton said he has been in touch with friends in Washington about the report, commissioned by Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson, and "they are ashamed that we've been so demeaned."

The report was prepared by Arnold Heeney, Canadian chairman of the International Joint Commission and former ambassador to Washington, and Livingston Merchant, former U.S. ambassador to Canada.

Beer Quest

Cyclists Chased By Train

JACUMBA, Calif. (AP)—Two motorcyclists roared into a train tunnel.

A few minutes later, having timed things badly, they roared back out. A few inches behind them was a train.

What was at the other end of the tunnel—and worth a confrontation with a diesel locomotive?

Beer. Thousands of cases of it—all there for the taking. The only problem: Getting it out.

On May 5, 11 cars of a San Diego, Arizona and Eastern Railway train were derailed north of Jacumba, in eastern San Diego County near the Mexican border. Two truck vans loaded with beer tumbled off a dais into Carrizo Gorge, 1,000 feet deep.

The railway figured the beer, 72,000 cans, was a complete loss.

But adventurous San Diego County youths figured other wise. They heard about the beer, and headed for Carrizo Gorge.

"It must be one of the most inaccessible places in the state," said a railway official. "The only way to get there is over the railway right-of-way, four miles in, four miles out, through two tunnels. It's all private property, of course, and there's a sheriff's deputy watching it like a hawk."

Sheriff's Deputy Alfred Dart has pointed on 24 people. Dart seized all the beer they had risked their lives to recover. Four were prosecuted for trespassing, the others released.

Despite Dart and daisies, nearly all the beer has disappeared.

"There were a couple of close calls in the tunnels," Dart said. "There were those two fellows on motorcycles. They managed to turn around and were putt-putting out when the front of the train tore the license plate off the rear fender of one of the cycles. I doubt if they'll go in there again."

Then there was a jeep surprised by a train, and vice versa, in mid-tunnel. The jeep hauled into a niche where it survived, thanks to a clearance of 1½ inches between it and the train.

One youngster fell while being lowered into the gorge on ropes. He suffered a concussion.

Perhaps the worse fate was suffered by a truck driver from San Bernardino, Calif., and three friends. They labored 36 hours in the blistering heat of the narrow gorge, hauling beer out of the defile inside truck tires lowered on ropes. And who was waiting for them, and their loot, at the tunnel's mouth?

Yep, Deputy Dart. But railroaders say the big joke of Jacumba is in the beer-drinking. As one railway official explained:

"The beer was in refrigerated vans. Once it gets warm, it tastes terrible, even if you re-refrigerate it. There wasn't a beer in that gorge worth walking across the street for."

Engines Out Shavers In

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP)—The U.S. forest service, in a press release, warns campers that power-driven equipment such as trail scooters, chain saws, power drills or "any other machine powered by a self-contained engine, is prohibited in wilderness or primitive areas."

Then, not wishing to make things too primitive, it says: "Use of personal items such as battery-operated shavers or toothbrushes will be permitted."

Adlai America's Public Voice Had Private Policy Qualms 'It Took Years Off My Life'

By ABCH MacKENZIE
WASHINGTON (CP) — Adlai Stevenson's death in London Wednesday stunned many world leaders and left the United States without a potent spokesman in the United Nations. It also removed the ranking member of the American liberal wing.
It was at the United Nations

Stevenson despite personal qualms often defended controversial American decisions, among them the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion and the sending of U.S. Marines to the Dominican Republic.

A leading radio correspondent, David Schoenbrun in Paris, said Stevenson last week during a Paris visit had called U.S.

intervention in the Dominican Republic "a massive blunder."

Schoenbrun also quoted Stevenson as saying his defence of it in the UN "took several years off my life."

In the U.S. capital, President Johnson was reported near tears when he got word of the 65-year-old UN ambassador's death.

The president called him "that towering man, a true citizen of the world."

Johnson said he is sending Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey to London to accompany Stevenson's body back home.

Stevenson came to Washington first as a young government lawyer at the start of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal administration in 1934.

Speaking on television later, Johnson asked adversary and friend alike to "pause for a moment and weep for one who was a friend and guide to all mankind."

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine but a broken spirit dryeth the bones," Stevenson once quoted a wise man as saying amid adversity—one of those hundreds of original or borrowed lines that fell so easily from his pen and lips.

Stevenson's spirit may have bent at times under the buffets of public life but they never broke, even when he was threatened so badly twice by Dwight D. Eisenhower for the U.S. presidency.

His wit, humor, eloquence and simple humanity won him a following whose dedicated loyalty was matched only by that accorded the late John Kennedy

Hurt Boy Lifted From B.C. Peak

NELSON (CP) — Richard Therrien, 13, was rescued from a windswept glacial park Wednesday night by a helicopter crew. Police said the boy was taken to hospital here for observation.

NELSON (CP) — A 13-year-old Vancouver boy lay injured high on a storm-swept mountain peak Wednesday night as a helicopter crew attempted a rescue.

A boys' camp counselor said the boy fell during a hiking trip at the 9,200-foot level of Kokanee peak.

Word did not reach this Kootenay city, 12 miles from the mountain, until 7 p.m., several hours after the accident. A helicopter was dispatched, but a spokesman of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. said the pilot might be forced to wait out the storm.

GROUP OF 22
The boy, whose name was withheld, was one of a group of 22 youngsters and four leaders from Camp Lourdes, who have been camping and hiking in Kokanee Glacier Park.
The extent of his injuries was not known.

Impound Whale, Union Urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the West Coast Fishermen's Union says he wants the Canadian Government to "impound" three live killer whales before the Americans get them.

Homer Stevens, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (Ind.), Wednesday criticized the federal and provincial governments for taking no action on the "export" of the killer whales.

He was referring to Namu, the killer whale caught off the B.C. coast and sold by three fishermen to a Seattle aquarium for $8,000.

The whale now is being towed down the coast to Seattle, and is being accompanied on the journey by a female and two small killer whales swimming outside Namu's pen.

Passengers aboard a B.C. Airlines plane Tuesday counted seven killer whales escorting the caged Namu. They made the count near Alert

Bay, 183 miles northwest of Vancouver.

In a letter to Fisheries Minister Robichaud, Homer Stevens said:

"We strongly urge the federal government to declare an embargo until the Vancouver aquarium, together with the federal and provincial governments, can impound the other three whales."

Stevens did not say how three killer whales might be impounded.

NDP Delegate Applauds Death Announcement

TORONTO (CP) — One delegate of the NDP national convention, David Middleton of Toronto, applauded when Leader T. C. Douglas announced the death of Adlai Stevenson, U.S. chief delegate to the UN Wednesday.

The NDP leader passed and said: "I hope there will be no more demonstrations of bad taste of that kind."
Mr. Middleton, who has strongly condemned U.S. policy in Viet Nam during the convention, later apologized for "a totally unbecomingly and shameful act on my part."

Some Pictures Certain In Historic Mars Sweep

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mariner 4 made its long-awaited flight past Mars Wednesday night and scientists said four hours later that it apparently made at least some pictures.

Doubt developed within minutes after the spacecraft's camera began operating that its systems were performing properly. Its signals told conflicting stories.

But Dr. William H. Pickering, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, told a late-evening press conference:

"I have no reason to believe that Mariner 4 did not record pictures during its historic flight past Mars earlier today."

The spacecraft was supposed to take, and relay later to earth, up to 21 pictures that could show whether the mystery planet harbors life—answering a question that has intrigued man for ages.

The camera at first appeared to be operating as planned. But later, signals indicated that the pictures for later playback might have functioned improperly.

Pickering said: "I believe the anomaly (conflict) in data received from the spacecraft may be associated with signals concerning whether the tape recorder stopped as planned."

Earlier, the Mariner tracking station at Woomera, Australia, reported that Mariner failed to take pictures. Pickering said he did not know "how they reached that conclusion."

Bribe Attempt

EX-AIDE DENIS CHARGED

OTTAWA (CP)—Former cabinet aide Raymond Denis was charged Wednesday with attempting to bribe a lawyer and attempting to obstruct the course of justice.

Crown Attorney John Cassella of Ottawa announced the charges a few hours after Denis was arrested by the RCMP at his home in suburban Montreal and taken to Ottawa by air.

Denis, former executive assistant to two Liberal cabinet ministers and a central figure at the Dorion judicial inquiry, was scheduled to appear in magistrate's court today at 10 a.m. EDT.

Denis, 32, is a lawyer and a former Liberal election campaign organizer. The charges against him:

● That in Ottawa between July 13 and 17 last year he "did unlawfully and corruptly offer Pierre Lamontagne, who then acting as agent on behalf of the U.S.A. in the extradition proceeding

Rope Submitted In Murder Case

By GEOFFREY MINISH

Who owned the rope that bound Susan French's wrist? The question arose in Colwood magistrate's court Wednesday, second day of the preliminary hearing into the capital murder charge against David Leonard Robinson, 24, of 324 Old Island Highway.

Susan's naked and battered body was found May 12 lying face downward in woods near her home at 2637 Chilco, Langford.

WRISTS TIED
The wrists of the 14-year-old St. Ann's Academy schoolgirl were tied behind her back by a 17-foot length of rope.

A friend of Robinson's testified Wednesday the rope seemed identical to a piece of rope that was in a car he had sold to Robinson's wife last March.

The witness, Leslie Cleghorn, 4118 Glenwood, said the rope was in the back of the 1966 Millman station wagon bought from him for $125 by Mrs. Lillian Robinson.

LOOSE BUMPER
He said he had used the rope to secure a loose bumper to the station wagon.

Asked by Crown prosecutor W. R. McIntyre to examine the rope taken from Susan's wrists, Mr. Cleghorn said he believed it was the same rope.

He repeated this opinion under cross-examination by defence counsel Alan Bigelow.

He agreed, however, that the bumper had sharp edges and that the rope shown him had no cut fibres.

BUMPER PRODUCED
A car bumper produced as a prosecution exhibit was identified by Mr. Cleghorn as belonging to the station wagon.

Corp. Tony Prokop of the RCMP crime detection laboratory in Vancouver testified he had examined both the rope and the bumper.

He had tied the rope round the bumper and found that certain kinks already in the rope fitted correctly into place.

Testimony was also taken from another expert, Mrs. Monica Simonsen, a serologist at the crime laboratory.

BLOOD ON CLOTHES
Mrs. Simonsen said she conducted tests on certain garments found at the murder scene. They included a girl's blue ski jacket, a pair of blue jeans, a pair of red nylon panties, a red-and-white striped girl's sweater, and a white brassiere.

All these garments bore traces of blood. Only on the jacket and the panties was she able to classify the blood, which was Group A. Susan's blood group.

JOLLY JACK Minus Kilt
Athletes of the navy have been invited to compete in the Victoria Highland Games July 31 at Macdonald Park.

The sailors, mostly non-Scots, will enter track and field events but are expected to leave the dancing and caber tossing to other competitors.

A feature of this year's games is to be a marathon race through the streets of Victoria with the finish line at the park.

Witnesses Recall Fatal Date

On the jacket and jeans she also found seminal fluid.

Mrs. Simonsen said she also tested a small rock found about six inches from the girl's head and discovered traces of Group A blood on it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bigelow, Mrs. Simonsen said that about 48 per cent of people belong to the A blood group.

She had been given no blood or sperm samples from Robinson to test, she said.

Another witness, Dr. James Portance, 2923 Glen Lake, said he had examined Susan's body around 3 p.m. on May 12.

He estimated the length of time she had been dead as anywhere between six and 24 hours.

Two cadets training at HMCS Venture, John Megan and Jack Koul, testified that on the evening of May 11 they had hitched a ride in a station wagon from the corner of Admirals Road and Craigflower.

DROVE AWAY
They said the driver, whom they identified as Robinson, dropped them at the Six Mile House, 494 Island Highway, then drove off back along Craigflower.

Neither was able to say what time in the evening they had been given the lift.

George Laak, manager of the Halfway House, 856 Esquimalt, said Robinson had been under contract there as a part-time

Janitor. On the evening of May 11 Robinson had come to work at his usual time of 6:30. Mr. Laak said, but he could not recall when he left.

His normal departure time was between 7:30 and 8 p.m. Peter Browning, 85 Atkins, said he lived in a house shown in police pictures taken in the murder area.

He said that shortly after 8 p.m. on May 11 he saw "a chap who seemed to be in a hurry" running down a nearby hill.

The man, who was wearing a bright blue shirt, a darker blue jacket, and dark trousers, turned left on the nearby railway tracks and headed in the direction of View Royal.

DESCRIBED MAN
Mr. Browning described the man as 5 foot 8 inches tall and about 180 pounds in weight. He could not recall any details of the man's face.

Mr. Bigelow asked Robinson to stand up in the prisoner's box, then said to Mr. Browning: "This man isn't anywhere near 180 pounds, is he?"

"No, he isn't," Mr. Browning said.

He said also that Robinson was nothing like as tall as the man he had seen.

ALSO SAW MAN
Mr. Browning's father-in-law, William Gray, 817 Goldstream, who was visiting Mr. Browning on the evening in question, said he had seen the man from the rear.

He put the man's weight at around 180 pounds.

A considerable part of earlier testimony Wednesday was devoted to building a picture of Susan's movements in the hours immediately before her disappearance May 11.

OTHER WITNESSES
Witnesses in this part of the hearing included teen-age girl friends of Susan and two city bus drivers.

Susan, according to these witnesses, was at Victoria Riding Academy, where she took jumping lessons, between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. May 11.

Susan, who came from La Canada, Calif., had been staying since last September with the Earnshaws at 2637 Chilco.

'Don't Halt Beautification'

Planning Hassle Unimportant Clack Tells City

By A. H. MURPHY
City Hall Reporter

Neither his resignation nor the city hall hassle which preceded it is important now, said planner Rod Clack Wednesday on his departure from Victoria.

What is vital is that there be no interruption in the municipal beautification program.

The thrust and parry of the controversy began two weeks ago when the resignation of Mr. Clack, as head of the special projects division, was followed by that of his two assistants, Peter Atkin and Ted Parsons.

Discord, which has been smouldering for years, broke out into the open at an explosive meeting last Friday at which charges and counter-charges were flung.

THREE RESIGNED
Upshot was that the resignations of all three planners were accepted by city council and the city manager Dennis Young, along with City Engineer James Garnett, both of whom figured in the dispute, were given votes of confidence by aldermen.

Since then several city organizations including the Community Planning Association have strongly protested the loss of the planners.

However, the temperature at city hall has subsided in the past few days and Wednesday Mr. Clack said that it took second place now to the fact of continuity in the municipal planning program.

HOPES TO HELP
Before his departure for Ottawa where he will collect and co-relate information on municipal planning for the federal centennial commission, Mr. Clack said he hopes to have a hand in the implementation of plans now on the drawing boards for Victoria.

"Concepts such as those for Bastion Square and the View Street shopping mall are still in the heads of us who planned

Tourist Season Can't Wait

Promoter Defies Rule, Replacing Road Signs

By IAN SMITH

The Saanich sign issue boiled over again Wednesday as Alf Pettersen, operator of Wooded Wonderland, claimed a restrictive municipal bylaw is driving his operation into the red.

Other operators of tourist businesses seemed in agreement that the sign regulations are unnecessarily restrictive. They attended a council meeting on the issue Monday.

Mr. Pettersen saw red—financially and figuratively—after officials took down a sign north of his property. The sign reads: "Wooded Wonderland, Turn Left 200 Yards."

"No person should be forced to obey an unreasonable law," said Mr. Pettersen, and promptly moved ahead with plans to replace the sign.

"If they want to take me to court, fine," he stated, "but I can't operate Wooded Wonderland without that sign."

He claimed that signs make a 30 per cent difference in his profits.

"And that's a big difference, let me tell you," he said heatedly. "It's the difference between operating in the red and in the black."

"If I have to operate without the sign, I might as well close down."

He said he would look for other sites for his operation.

Battle Every Year

"I'm plain fed up. Every year I've had a battle with somebody about this. I'm beginning to think that this city does not want any tourist attractions here."

"I appreciate the idea behind the sign bylaw, but I feel that an amendment should be made in the case of tourist businesses. The tourist just can't be forced to spend his time searching for places to go; there are enough attractions in other municipalities that can claim his attention."

He pointed out that the bylaw appeared to be discriminatory, in that it is so worded that signs that were up before the bylaw came into force two years ago are allowed to remain up.

This means that such established attractions as the Butchart Gardens can advertise with outside signs.

Mr. Pettersen wrote to the council about the matter on June 22, but has yet to receive an answer to his request for permission to erect the two four-by-five-foot signs at each end of his establishment.

"There won't be another council meeting now for three weeks," he said, "and I can't wait that long. The tourist season will be over half gone by then."

"A business without a sign is a sign of no business."

"I can't afford to take this lying down."

Saanich does permit small directional signs, but it was generally agreed by council and operators that these were ineffective.

New Victoria Fire Department, New Victoria, B.C. That was the address on two letters recently received by Victoria fire department.

Now there's no New Victoria in British Columbia, so the Better Business Bureau tried British Cameroons. There's no New Victoria there either.

Could the person have meant C.B., Cape Breton, instead of B.C.?

Yes! was the joyous response from New Brunswick and the letters continued their delayed journey to New Victoria Fire Department, New Victoria, Cape Breton.

The English dancer is teaching a six-week course on ballet to Victoria students. After the course he will do a lecture tour of the east coast, then return to the Royal Ballet.

Mr. White has lived and breathed ballet since 1933, but it is only during the past 15 years that he has evolved his system of lecture tours.

During the winter he is a featured dancer with the world-

famous Royal Ballet, working with the cream of ballet—Rudolf Nureyev and Dame Margot Fonteyn.

He spends his spare time talking to the public, changing many preconceived ideas about ballet.

For instance, there is the myth which states that most ballet dancers are "fissies."

"I especially like lecturing before a group of teenage boys. I'm old enough to be their father, but I can run circles around them. A dancer has to be in top shape," Mr. White said Wednesday.

At a lecture, Mr. White, who is 42, strides on stage in ordinary street clothes.

"It is very important to show up looking like a normal human being."

He talks for a while about some aspect of ballet. Then pulls off his jacket and tie and throws himself into the dance.

He says ballet is "first an athletic craft, later it may become art."

"All ballet dancers are athletes."

What does he see in Victoria's artistic future?

I am interested in seeing what could be done here.

"Victoria is a superb spot for it."

"You have a beautiful city here, and artists like to work in beautiful surroundings."

Mr. White will dance at a special program at the McPherson Playhouse Aug. 18.

Eddie Shagan is likely to end up with Rochester in next season, one big reason being that the Americans may play as many as 10 of their home games in Maple Leaf Gardens because of the American Bowling Congress' Tourneyment being held in Rochester ... and can expect Vancouver Canucks to be a bigger threat this season now that Bert Olinstead is the new coach. The guess is that Olinstead is being groomed to eventually move up to the New York Rangers, and that means he will first have to get himself some sort of a record of success ... Gene Oliver's second home run of the game snapped a seventh inning tie, pacing Milwaukee Braves to a 6-3 victory over Chicago Cubs and a split of their doubleheader Wednesday.

The Cubs took the opener 5-2, stretching their winning string to four, and pulled a triple play—third in the majors this year—in the second inning of the nightcap before the Braves, who were led by manager Dan

Fischer, clipped for three runs in the second inning, blanked Chicago on two hits the rest of the way for his second victory.

The Cubs completed their triple play after Milwaukee had scored twice in the second on two walks and singles by Eddie Mathews and Mack Jones.

Rico Carty was on third and

Jones on first when Woody Woodward fouled to catcher Ed Bailey. Jones faked a break toward second and Bailey fired to shortstop Don Kessinger, whose return throw to the plate caught

Accuser In Tears

CLEVELAND (AP) — A teenage girl broke down under cross-examination and left the courtroom crying Wednesday after she testified that professional football star Jim Brown slapped her around in a motel room on the night of June 19 and forced her to commit a sex act.

Brenda Ayres, who was April 14, said the 29-year-old Cleveland Browns fullback plied her with whiskey and slapped her face, hip and stomach. She has charged Brown with assault and battery. He pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial which opened Monday.

Seattle NFL Site?

SEATTLE (AP) — The Times quoted Pete Rozelle, National Football League commissioner Wednesday as saying the Seattle "could be the balance franchise" in the circuit by 1980.

In a telephone interview zelle qualified his remarks, saying a suitable place would have to be found and added was certain "we can find proper persons with whom deal in Seattle."

"We have indicated before that Seattle is one of the cities which we will explore in our two-stage expansion in the next couple of years," Rozelle was quoted.

Seattle made a strong bid last fall for the Cleveland franchise in the American baseball league but the move was balked by lack of a suitable stadium in the city.

Adlai America's Public Voice Had Private Policy Qualms 'It Took Years Off My Life'

By ABCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Adlai Stevenson's death in London Wednesday stunned many world leaders and left the United States without a potent spokesman in the United Nations. It also removed the ranking member of the American liberal wing.

It was at the United Nations

Stevenson despite personal qualms often defended controversial American decisions, among them the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion and the sending of U.S. marines to the Dominican Republic.

A leading radio correspondent, David Schoenbrun in Paris, said Stevenson last week during a Paris visit had called U.S.

intervention in the Dominican Republic "a massive blunder."

Schoenbrun also quoted Stevenson as saying his defence of it in the UN "took several years off my life."

In the U.S. capital, President Johnson was reported near tears when he got word of the 65-year-old UN ambassador's death.

The president called him "that towering man, a true citizen of the world."

Johnson said he is sending Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey to London to accompany Stevenson's body back home.

Humphrey also inherits Stevenson's mantle as the leader of the American Liberals.

Stevenson came to Washington first as a young government lawyer at the start of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal administration in 1934.

Speaking on television later, Johnson asked adversary and friend alike to "pause for a moment and weep for one who was a friend and guide to all mankind."

"A merry heart doeth good

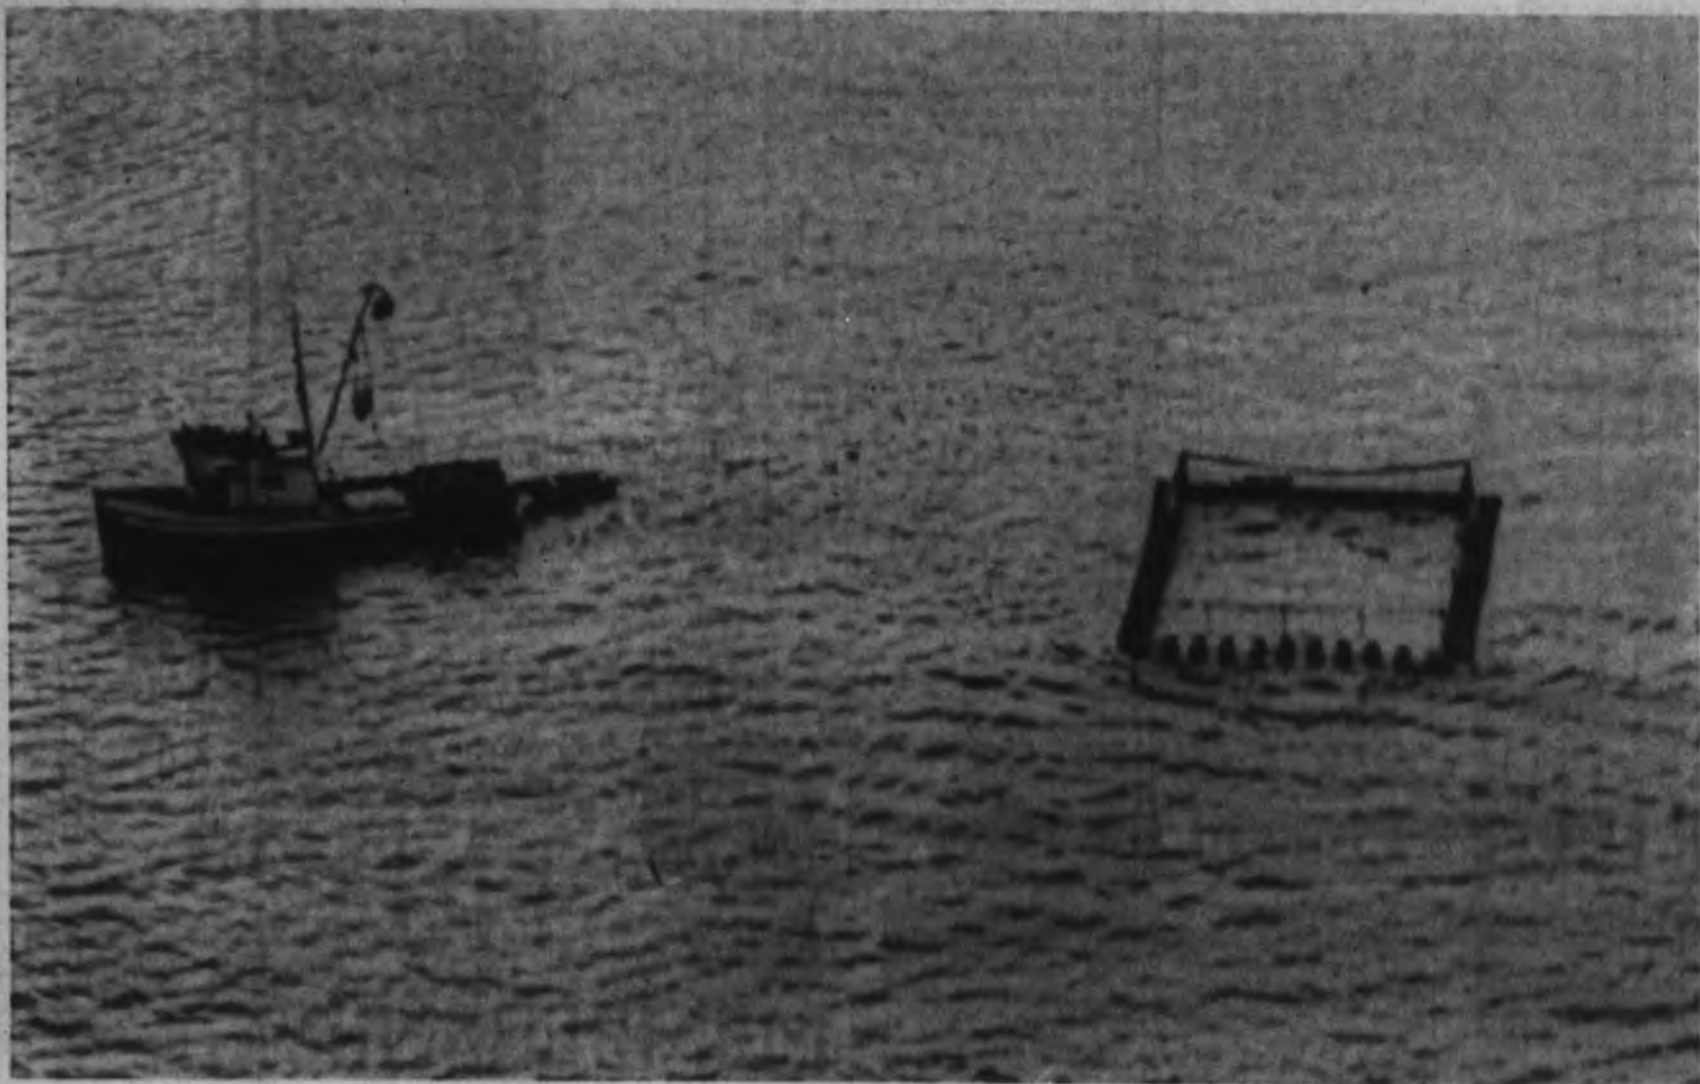

like a medicine but a broken spirit dryeth the bones," Stevenson once quoted a wise man as saying amid adversity—one of those hundreds of original or borrowed lines that fell so easily from his pen and lips.

Stevenson's spirit may have bent at times under the buffets of public life but they never broke, even when he was threatened so badly twice by Dwight D. Eisenhower for the U.S. presidency.

His wit, humor, eloquence and simple humanity won him a following whose dedicated loyalty was matched only by that accorded the late John Kennedy

Bribe Attempt

DENIS FACES CHARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Former cabinet aide Raymond Denis was charged Wednesday with attempting to bribe a lawyer and attempting to obstruct the course of justice.

Crown Attorney John Cassels of Ottawa announced the charges a few hours after Denis was arrested by the RCMP at his home in suburban Montreal and taken to Ottawa by air.

Denis, former executive assistant to two Liberal cabinet ministers and a central figure at the Dorion judicial inquiry, was scheduled to appear in magistrate's court today at 10 a.m. EDT.

Denis, 32, is a lawyer and a former Liberal election campaign organizer. The charges against him:

● That in Ottawa between July 13 and 17 last year he "did unlawfully and corruptly offer Pierre Lamontagne, who then acting as agent on behalf of the U.S.A. in the extradition proceeding

Hurt Boy Lifted From B.C. Peak

NELSON (CP)—Richard Therrien, 13, was rescued from a windswept glacial park Wednesday night by a helicopter crew. Police said the boy was taken to hospital here for observation.

NELSON (CP) — A 13-year-old Vancouver boy lay injured high on a storm-swept mountain peak Wednesday night as a helicopter crew attempted a rescue.

A boys' camp counselor said the boy fell during a hiking trip at the 9,200-foot level of Kokanee peak.

Word did not reach this Kootenay city, 12 miles from the mountain, until 7 p.m., several hours after the accident. A helicopter was dispatched, but a spokesman of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. said the pilot might be forced to wait out the storm.

GROUP OF 22

The boy, whose name was withheld, was one of a group of 22 youngsters and four leaders from Camp Lourdes, who have been camping and hiking in Kokanee Glacier Park.

The extent of his injuries was not known.

Strike Action Withheld By Postmen

OTTAWA (UPI)—Montreal postal employees have decided at an all-day meeting here to withhold strike action over wage demands until they know definitely what increases the government will offer them.

Possibilities of a nation-wide strike of postal workers appeared to have been averted—at least for the time being.

Impound Whale, Union Urges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the West Coast Fishermen's Union says he wants the Canadian Government to "impound" three live killer whales before the Americans get them.

Homer Stevens, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (Ind.), Wednesday criticized the federal and provincial governments for taking no action on the "export" of the killer whales.

He was referring to Namu, the killer whale caught off the B.C. coast and sold by three fishermen to a Seattle aquarium for $3,000.

The whale now is being towed down the coast to Seattle, and is being accompanied on the journey by a female and two small killer whales swimming outside Namu's pen.

Passengers aboard a B.C. Airlines plane Tuesday counted seven killer whales escorting the caged Namu. They made the count near Alert Bay, 183 miles northwest of Vancouver.

In a letter to Fisheries Minister Robichaud, Homer Stevens said:

"We strongly urge the federal government to declare an embargo until the Vancouver aquarium, together with the federal and provincial governments, can impound the other three whales."

Stevens did not say how three killer whales might be impounded.

NDP Delegate Applauds Death Announcement

TORONTO (CP) — One delegate of the NDP national convention, David Middleton of Toronto, applauded when Leader T. C. Douglas announced the death of Adlai Stevenson, U.S. chief delegate to the UN Wednesday.

The NDP leader passed and said: "I hope there will be no more demonstrations of bad taste of that kind."

Mr. Middleton, who has strongly condemned U.S. policy in Viet Nam during the convention, later apologized for "a totally unbecomingly and shameful act on my part."

LONDON (AP) — Adlai E. Stevenson, the voice of the United States at the United Nations since 1961, collapsed on a London street Wednesday and died. He was 65.

First indications were that he had suffered a stroke or a heart attack, but neither the U.S. embassy nor St. George's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead, was prepared to state a cause of death immediately.

SADDENED WEST

His death saddened much of the Western world, which had regarded Stevenson as its forthright spokesman in debates at the United Nations, where he clashed often with Soviet spokesmen.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General U Thant said Stevenson had earned the respect and admiration of all his colleagues "for his extraordinary human qualities." Former president Harry Truman said Stevenson's quest for peace "will be long remembered by a grateful nation and his friends throughout the world."

RADIO RECORDING

Stevenson had attended UN meetings in Geneva and had arrived in London to talk with friends and diplomatic contacts. He made a radio recording Wednesday at the embassy, and friends there said he seemed perfectly normal.

He then left the embassy in Grosvenor Square.

He collapsed on the sidewalk in front of the International Sportmen's Club at 30 Upper Grosvenor St., halfway between the embassy and Park Lane.

He was walking with Mrs. Ronald Tree, who holds the

Some Pictures Certain In Historic Mars Sweep

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mariner 4 made its long-awaited flight past Mars Wednesday night and scientists said four hours later that it apparently made at least some pictures.

Doubt developed within minutes after the spacecraft's camera began operating that its systems were performing properly. Its signals told conflicting stories.

But Dr. William H. Pickering, director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, told a late-evening press conference:

"I have no reason to believe that Mariner 4 did not record pictures during its historic flight past Mars earlier today."

The spacecraft was supposed to take, and relay later to earth, up to 21 pictures that could show whether the mystery planet harbors life—answering a question that has intrigued man for ages.

The camera at first appeared to be operating as planned. But later, signals indicated that the tape recorder which stores the pictures for later playback might have functioned improperly.

Pickering said: "I believe the anomaly (conflict) in data received from the spacecraft may be associated with signals concerning whether the tape recorder stopped as planned."

Earlier, the Mariner tracking station at Woomera, Australia, reported that Mariner failed to take pictures. Pickering said he did not know "how they reached that conclusion."
